* Personal allowance is reduced by £1 for every £2 of income which is in excess of £100,000 - this is the personal allowance limit. This will mean that for 2023/24, anyone earning £125,140 of income during the tax year will lose all of their personal allowance. This includes non saving/dividends income, dividend income and savings income.

 The BRB (Scotland: intermediate rate band) threshold is extended by the grossed-up equivalent of personal pension contributions and Gift Aid donations paid by the taxpayer in the tax year, or treated as paid in the tax year.

 The personal tax thresholds for income tax and national insurance will be updated in line with inflation in April 2028

* A 0% rate is available on savings income of up to £5,000. This is only available if income from non savings and non dividend income does not exceed £5,000. You are not eligible for the starting rate for savings if your other income is £17,570 or more. Every £1 of other income above your Personal Allowance reduces your starting rate for savings by £1 and this becomes relevant if your other income is less than £17,570.

A companies S455 CT charge on a directors loan balance not paid within 9 months of the end of the company's financial year end will be applied at the high rate of tax on dividend income.

The rent-a-room exemption is available where the taxpayer lets out part of the home they live in as furnished residential accommodation.

 The trading allowances can be deducted from income from a trade instead of deducting actual expenses incurred. This is beneficial if expenses incurred are less than this allowance. The trading allowance of £1,000 applies to all trades conducted by the tax payer and not £1,000 per trade.

*The property allowances can be deducted from income from a trade instead of deducting actual expenses incurred. This is beneficial if expenses incurred are less than this allowance. This allowance covers all properties generating income for the tax payer and not £1,000 per property.

 Following the end of the tax year in question.

Filing late by even a day will result in an automatic late filing penalty of £100. This is the date following the end of the tax year in question. The balance of any income tax owed to HMRC for this tax year must also be paid by this date. If you are captured by payments on account rules, the first payment for the current tax year (the tax year in which the 31st January deadline falls) will also be due on this date in addition to any balance unpaid for the previous tax year.

*A second payment on account will be due on this date if you are captured by payment on account rules (see ***).

High Income Child Benefit Charge

High Income Child Benefit Charge (HICBC)

	2022/23	2023/24	2024/25	2025/26
Lower threshold	£50,000	£50,000	£60,000	£60,000
Upper threshold	£60,000	£60,000	£80,000	£80,000

Only applicable to families who receive child benefit, where adjusted net income of higher earner is above lower threshold. HICBC is equivalent to 1% of child benefit received by the family, for every £200 (was £100 in tax year 2022/23 and 2023/24) of adjusted net income over lower threshold. The higher earner in the family must declare child benefit received by them or their partner on their tax return. The recipient of child benefit can elect not to receive it in order to avoid the HICBC, without losing their right to accrue certain state benefits. Child benefit payments can subsequently be recommenced if the claimant chooses.

The High Income Benefit Charge can be paid via a tax payers tax code from 6th April 2025.

Adjusted net income is total taxable income (from all sources), less qualifying pension contributions and Gift Aid donations.

*Tax relief at the taxpayer's income tax rate (basic, high or additional if in England, Wales and NI) is given on the individual's pension contributions up to 100% of annual relevant earnings, capped by the annual allowance limit. Annual relevant earnings are a combination from profits made from a trade whilst self employed, salary, benefits in kind, bonus and commission payments from employer - it does not include savings, investment or rental income. Tax relief will only be provided to contributions made by those made under the age of 75. If an individual has no annual relevant earnings in a tax year, they can still obtain tax relief on any pension contributions they make up to a gross amount of £3,600. This would mean that you could make a contribution of £2,880 and your pension provider will be able to claim £720 back from HMRC making your total contribution £3,600.

The annual allowance is the total amount that can normally be paid into a private pension by an individual, their employer or a third party on their behalf, to pensions in a tax year without facing a tax charge. The lower limit refers to how much the annual allowance can be reduced down to if you are a high income individual with adjusted income of more than £260,000. Some high income individuals will have their annual allowance for the tax year reduced. An individual's annual allowance will be reduced by £1 for every £2 their Adjusted income is above £260,000. Adjusted net income is your total taxable income. Included in this are things like your salary, rental income, money from freelance work etc. Not included in this total are tax reliefs like losses from previous years, pensions contributions, or donations to charities. But just to make things confusing, your Personal Allowance is included (this is a deduction from total taxable income).

LTA is measured against the capital value of the pension benefits at the time they are first taken.

*The LTA charge was abolished in tax year 2023/24.

Types Of Private Pension Schemes

Type of scheme	Method	How does the tax relief work?
Personal pensions	Relief at source	The individual's contributions are made net of basic rate income tax, from pay that's already been taxed. The scheme administrator then applies to HMRC for the basic rate tax relief and adds this to the individual's pension fund. Higher or additional rate taxpayers can claim any extra relief due via their self-assessment tax return. The relief is received either by an adjustment to the individual's PAYE coding (employees only) or via self-assessment.
Occupational pension schemes	Net pay	The employer deducts the employee's gross contribution from gross pay before PAYE income tax is calculated and passes the contribution to the scheme administrator. This method allows the employee to directly get the appropriate level of tax relief immediately, even for higher or additional rate taxpayers - so there's no need to make a separate claim for higher or additional rate relief. Employee national insurance is still calculated on full pay, before the contribution is deducted.
Salary sacrifice	Salary sacrifice	Salary or bonus sacrifice, sometimes also referred to as 'salary exchange', involves an employee agreeing to change their terms and conditions of employment relating to pay. Under their revised contract, the employee gives up some of their salary, or contractual bonus, in return for a non-cash benefit from the employer - for example, an employer pension contribution. This results in both an income tax and national insurance saving for the employee. The employer also benefits as they also do not have to pay employers national insurance on the pension contribution towards the employees pension scheme.

Property Reliefs

Residential Landlords
	2022/23	2023/24	2024/25	2025/26
Proportion of finance costs allowable against letting income*	Nil	Nil	Nil	Nil
Property allowance	£1,000	£1,000	£1,000	£1,000
Capital allowances	Nil	Nil	Nil	Nil
*Finance costs comprise mainly interest, but include related matters such as arrangement fees. A tax reducer at 20% of the disallowed finance costs is available to reduce the landlord's income tax liability, but is subject to certain restrictions. These rules do not affect qualifying furnished holiday lets, commercial property or corporate landlords Capital allowances not available to residential landlords however replacement relief is. This relief allows landlords to claim the cost of replacing a domestic item in a property which is let and that item is for the use of the tenant. It does not cover fixtures such as sinks and kitchens but moveable items available for use by the tenant. However the cost of repairing a worn or dilapidated asset such as fixtures is normally an allowable expense as long as the entirety of the asset is not replaced - ie a worn out kitchen pulled out and refitted brand new as this would be considered a capital expense.
