

WHAT IS INTELLIGENCE?

I suspect I am who I am. I confirm who I am only when I know who to be. I know who to be only when I've begun to be me. I've begun to be me only when you know you with who we decide to be. Who we decide to be is you known with me as one.

We know that we know. We know what we don't know. We know who we must yet be. We know why to begin as one. We know we can decide to be us.

You are that which knows.

You are also that which can know.

You decide why to be you, how to be you, and what is known as you.

True intelligence is known when you beseech others to know the true you.

True intelligence is known when you delight in being why you are you.

True intelligence is an examination of the loving nature of what wants to be.

True intelligence is proposing a known solution for the good of all.

True intelligence is trusting who you know you to be to know what you may decide to be.