

MARBLE USE AND WARRANTY WAIVER

Marble is a beautiful surface that has been used as countertops for years. Here are some things you need to know before purchasing your marble countertop:

- Marble is a porous stone and is susceptible to staining. Common stain producers, including acidic products like lemon, vinegar, and wine, can cause stains because they strip away the protective sealant that covers a marble countertop. Another stain-producing substance is cooking oil. Oil seeps through the pores of marble and stains countertops from the inside.
- Excessive chopping, cutting, or dragging heavy appliances can heavily damage your marble countertop surface with numerous penetrating scratches.
- Despite marble's natural cool feel, it is not impervious to extreme temperatures. When using hot pots and pans, place a trivet under each one before setting them down on your countertop.
- CKC, llc does offer a professional strength upgraded sealer that decreases the risk of staining on some marbles. Ask our office about DryTreat Upgrades!

Custom Kitchen Countertops LLC, does not guarantee any marble surface. The stone will scratch, stain, ding and dent and slightly yellow over time, even with the best care and sealing. For homeowners that chose this surface, these properties add to the beauty and character of the stone.
