ABOUT THE INSTITUTE

The Institute of Corporate and Public Sector Professionals (ICPSP) of Nigeria is a nonprofit membership and research organization for Corporate and Public Sector Professionals. The ICPSP is dedicated to supporting professionals whose daily effort impact people's lives in ways that are felt far beyond the workplace; by helping to create better managers and leaders, we are creating a better society.

ICPSP vision is 'Corporate & Public Sector Professionals everywhere are the best they can be' - you can read our full vision and mission statement here

ICPSP-A professional membership institute

ICPSP is the only professional membership institute for corporate and public sector professionals in Nigeria. It represents its members, lead research initiatives, and promotes activities of professionals' membership.

Given the broader scope of membership, ICPSP has members all over Nigeria working for leading private, public, and third-sector employers. Our membership criteria ensure that members can demonstrate their professional standing.

ABOUT THE ICPSP 2020 NATIONAL CONFERENCE

The Institute of Corporate & Public Sector Professionals is pleased to invite you to attend the National Conference scheduled to be hosted by Proshare-Web-TV Nigeria on 8th August 2020 from 11 am - 2.00 pm.

Through these Conference, ICPSP offers a platform for presentations, discussions and interactions with local and international scholars. Majority of our events presents the opportunity to disseminate research contribution to local and international research communities.

At ICPSP, we recognize that we can be a powerful driver of change. Our members are experts who are passionate about nation-building. Occasionally, therefore; we bring together students, faculty, staff, and other stakeholders to exchange ideas about themes that are relevant to the current states of the Nation. We propel the discussions to create real, collaborative solutions to seeming challenges.

The overall theme of the this 2020 ICPSP National conference has been designed to appeal particularly to students, professionals in private and public sectors (at all levels of their career development) and other stakeholders. Primarily, our conferences are aimed at capacity building and development of participants, including emerging researchers whose interest aligned with Nation - building agenda; current and emerging issues.

Overall Conference Objectives:

- To recognize participants as responsible and transformational Ambassador of Change within the Corporate & Public Sector in Nigeria;
- To discuss and devise a methodology to actualize key subjects identified within the conference theme and sub-themes.

Specific Conference Aim:

- To address the current state of the Nation & her citizen during & after a pandemic
- To address the Extreme Poverty: A Symptom of Covid-19 in Africa.
- To discuss key topic issues around:
 - Professionalism, Education and Health Matters

PROTOCOL:

- ❖ The National Executive Council of the Institute of Corporate & Public Sector Professionals (ICPSP).
- ❖ The Keynote Speaker & Dean Faculty of Management Science, Lagos State University (LASU) - Professor B. R Yusuf
- ❖ Distinguished guest speakers
- ❖ Captains of industries, representatives of professional bodies & other Academic Institutions.
- ❖ The ICPSP Directorate (Membership, Education and Publicity) able led by the Acting Registrar Mrs Omolara Adelakun
- ❖ The Chairman of ICPSP 2020 Annual Conference - Mr Taiwo Moshood
- ❖ The ICPSP Secretariat & Associate Staff
- ❖ Colleagues;
- ❖ Gentlemen of the Press;
- ❖ Ladies & Gentlemen.

I'm delighted to join you all virtually today , 8th August 2020, to share my thoughts with you and many others who believe it's time to reflect on the lessons learnt from the emergence of COVID -19.

First and foremost, I like to extend my sincere gratitude to the Institute of Corporate & Public Sector Professionals for allowing me this great honour and privilege to be in the presence of a lot of greatness virtually . I'm talking about:

- Great educational experts!
- Great distinguished guest speakers!
- Greater senior colleagues including academia, researchers and professionals. Those whose voice meant a lot during and after this novel pandemic.

Along with that, let me commend the effort of the conference committee for the choice of the conference theme . I'm most especially convinced that speaking about "Extreme Poverty as a Symptoms of Covid-19 in Africa aligns with the view of Nelson Mandela when he said and I quote:

"As long as poverty, injustice and gross inequality exist in the world, none of us can truly exist. "

COVID-19 threatens our existence today as a human . The global economy is in distress. Nations are either locked down or in partial lockdown. The consequence of which has serious economic, social and governance impact. In the later part of my speech, I will speak in details on how ESG Issues matters to us now, more than ever.

Historically, it is hard to speak about extreme poverty without paying a huge tribute to the work of Father Joseph Wresinski. On October the 17, 1987, several people assembled at the Trocadero in Paris where the Universal Declaration of Human Rights was signed to honour the victims of extreme poverty, violence and hunger. It was on this occasion that poverty was proclaimed as a violation of human rights.

Recently, the President of the United Nations General Assembly - His Excellency Tijjani Muhammad-Bande, inaugurates the Alliance for Poverty Eradication. During the inauguration, a High-Level meeting which focuses on Trends, Options and Strategies in Poverty Eradication across the World conveyed by the UN President hosted heads

In his opening remarks during the high-level meeting, President Muhammad-Bande said, and I quote;

"While poverty is bad, and has been established as such, the COVID-19 pandemic has made a bad situation worse."

He went on to say:

"Before the onset of the pandemic, 2.1 billion people were classified as poor globally, with 767 million living in extreme poverty. It is estimated that by the year 2030, more than 100 million people would have relapsed into poverty, due to COVID-19 and climate change,"

While addressing the high-level meeting; the President of the Federal Republic of Nigeria - President Muhammed Buhari noted that about 54 per cent of Nigeria's roughly 200 million people are in various forms of poverty. Hence the commitment of the Nigeria government towards lifting 100 million Nigerians out of poverty within a ten years' timeline.

Seventeenth (17th) Oct of every year is the International Day for Poverty Eradication. This day presents an opportunity to acknowledge the effort and struggle of people living in poverty, a chance for them to make their concerns heard, and a moment to recognize that every life matters including the life of those who are extremely poor.

An extract of a short piece of an article; titled: "Everything You Need to Know and Understand About Extreme Poverty" published on the website of the Global Citizen read and I quote

"The majority of people living in extreme poverty are located in rural areas and lack access to adequate education, work in agriculture, and are under the age of 18".

The article also noted that:

"there is no single cause of extreme poverty; many factors play a role. Gender inequality, discrimination, conflict and crisis can all limit access to infrastructure, services, and information that help provide basic needs".

Theoretically, one may employ the relevance of the "relative deprivation theory" to explain how people who are deprived of things deemed valuable in society such as money, justice, status or privilege; join social movements with the hope of redressing their grievances. The relative deprivation theory (RDT) remains a subject for further research.

For Africa to build a sustainable future, it is essential to intensive efforts towards prevention of extreme poverty post -COVID-19, i.e. campaign against inequalities, promote inclusion, social and universal programs that enable the building of a secure, just, free and harmonious societies which offers opportunities for all.

Of particular relevance to the ICPSP conference is the Keynote address of Professor Stephen Devereux of the University of Sussex at the Botswana Poverty Eradication conference. Professor Stephen argues that nations with a strong commitment to social protection are more likely to experience poverty reduction.

In a similar view, Babatunde and Sheshangai reveal the relevance of social protection in the African Nation in their report titled: A Review of Potential Contribution and Impact on Poverty Reduction published by UNDP. The report provides insight into how nations such as Ethiopia, Kenya, Mozambique and many others employ social protection strategy toward poverty reduction.

Putting social protection into context, we mean, policies and programs design to reduce poverty and vulnerability. It involves initiative that promotes efficient labour markets, diminishing people's exposure to risks, and enhancing their capacity to manage economic and social risks, such as unemployment, exclusion, sickness, disability and old age.

To this end, you would agree with me that there seems to be a massive gap between the narrative of extreme poverty eradication and the fact on the ground within the African Nation. Hence, a conference of this nature should, therefore;

- (i) propel new thinking;
- (ii) set plan for mitigating the impact of COVID-19;
- (iii) offer recommendation and policy contribution concerning economic recovery, social and governance issues.

And that is why I align my thoughts with the contribution of Professor Patrick Lumumba when he said and I quote:

"Poverty is an Industry. "

COVID-19 has now contributed to the significant growth of the poverty Industry, i.e. aggravating what Paul Spicker refers to as "unacceptable hardship" which is the effect of an overlapping and interrelated idea such as; (i) lack of basic needs (ii) limited resources (iii) poor standard of living (iv) inequalities (v) exclusion (vi) lack of basic security e.t.c.

Given the multiplier effect of COVID-19 pandemic in Africa, I hope that this conference could potentially provide useful insight into:

- Professionalism, Education and Health Matters amidst of COVID -19;
- Economic Recovery, SME and Information Technology during and after a pandemic
- The role of NGOs during and After pandemic?

While I trust that distinguished speakers will do justice to the above sub -themes, let me quickly draw some references from the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), endorsed by the community of nations in 2015 as a policy roadmap through 2030. The SDGs lay out the contours of the world we all want, and indeed the need for a world free of poverty and deprivation. A fairer society, a world that respects natural limits.

The global goals idea represents the interlink of what one would call "5 Ps" :

- prosperity ,
- people ,
- planet ,
- partnerships and
- peace .

The SDGs are the right response to the great challenges of the 21st century . It is the proper antidote to the loss of trust in institutions of all kind, and, in some countries, the loss of faith in governance.

We should , however, note that turning the SDGs aspirations into concrete plans will not be easy. It will require those traits that define the character of :

- Professor Mohammed Yunus,
- Professor Mervyn King,
- Martin Luther King,
- Mother Theresa,

This conference is ambitious as it aimed to address and demonstrate firm commitments to the SDGs. I, therefore, consider it worthy that a gathering of this nature could perhaps address the overlap between the SDGs and the IMF mandate for global economic stability and economic prosperity that is both inclusive and sustainable.

In doing so, I look forward to the outcome of this conference in the form of policy document; covering at least four dimensions of SDGs

1. Economic—helping the low-income Africa Nations achieve the SDGs;
2. Social—the importance of inclusion and equity;
3. Environmental—tackling climate change; and
4. Governance—the centrality of strong institutions.

Governance in Africa needs urgent attention. Dr M.O Ibrahim said and I quote:

"There is a crisis of leadership and governance in Africa, and we must face it. "

Speaking briefly on the governance dimension of the SDGs, I agree with IFAC ten pages' article publication titled "Governance is King". The philosophical thinking of Professor Mervyn King dominates the piece of write up.

Professor King advances the knowledge of good governance via the lenses of sustainability developments, integrated thinking and corporate citizenship. In a real sense, governance is the foundation upon which everything else is built. If institutions are weak, the odds of SDG success are severely handicapped. To achieve the SDGs target calls for effective, accountable and inclusive institutions at all levels.

I like to emphasize that, effective, accountable and inclusive institutions at all levels apply across the board (in both private and public sector), nationally and among Africa nations. It applies to both donors and recipients of official aid—to make sure that assistance is delivered effectively and transparently, i.e. reaching the people who need it, without waste, diversion, or duplication.

It applies to private corporations and to state-owned enterprises—to make sure that their investments take place transparently, on a level playing field, benefitting the citizens of the country.

To this extent, I like to say a few words about corruption, a real economic and social curse. By undermining trust and delegitimizing institutions, corruption makes it hard for

Think about it; If someone does not pay their fair share of taxes, governments cannot raise the revenue needed for SDG s priorities. Ev en worse, the legitimacy of the whole system is undermined. At the same time, if corruption is rampant, governments might be tempted to spend money on projects that generate kickbacks but little social value — again, undermining the SDG agenda.

By extension, we also need the private sector to invest in long -term, sustainable projects that support the SDGs. But they are unlikely to do so if forced to pay a "corruption tax." The genuine risks and uncertainty that come with any investment decision will undoubtedly be magnified by corruption.

Unsurprisingly, IMF research found that corruption and weak governance is associated with lower growth, investment, and tax revenue collection —and with high inequality and social exclusion.

So, what is the solution? I argue that criminal enforcement is essential, of course, but on its own is not enough. Evidence shows that successful anti -corruption initiatives are built on institutional reforms that emphasize transparency and accountability —for example, shining a light on al l aspects of the government budget.

There will be need to scrutinize Government palliative spending during and after COVID-19 in Africa.

Before I conclude, I like to sha re with the conference , the words of Mary Robinson, Former United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights , and now the Chair of "The Elders" (www.theelders.org). Mary said, and I quote :

"COVID-19 exposes the intersectionality between health, poverty, gender, race, marginalisation and disability. "

At the end of this conference, I know that some of you might feel pessimist about the future of extreme poverty, rising inequalities, insecurity and good governance. But it's not enough, to know we stand against; we also need to know what we stand for.

- Professor Mohammed Yunus is known for his remarkable idea of “three zeros.”
- Professor Patrick Lumumba is known as a renowned Pan-Africanist and anti -corruption crusader

So here are my ambitions for Africa and what I like to be known for : "PEG."

- Poverty: I believe in Africa where we can build a community of shared future for all humanity , where people are free from "poverty" and can achieve common development;
- Education : I believe in Africa where an experiential quality "education" is not a privilege but a right, we all deserve;
- Governance: I believe in Africa where good "governance", transparency and accountability underpin activities both in the private and public sector .

So, I like to conclude with a special invitation to the speakers. Let 's be provocative , let's be lively, let 's keep us all holding our breath , either in the agreement or not in agreement ; so that we can all together learn great lessons from the novel COVID-19 pandemic .

On behalf of ICPSP, I warmly welcome you and I wish the conference committee a successful conference.

Thank you.
