

United Sisters History

United Sisters began as a result of three women, from various organizations, who met at a local conference in 1999. The women decided to maintain contact and meet monthly in an effort to maximize the use of resources disbursed among them.

Within months, additional women were invited to the lunch meetings, each expressing the desire to nourish the bond of support and trust that had surfaced from each gathering. As the monthly attendees continued to increase, the meetings resided over dinner and brought together a network that exposed the common interest of ensuring the positive development of family, education, careers, hopes, and dreams in women.

Armed with encouragement and strength, the women set forth their objectives by transforming the group into a social organization designed with the purpose of reaching those goals. The name 'United Sisters' was unanimously agreed upon as it represents the essence of the organization and speaks to the power that exists in a collective stance.

The United Sisters continue to attract new members that share the aspiration of assisting women to reach their full potential and raise opportunistic awareness via workshops, community events, and social support. The mission is clear, obtainable and echoes on with the understanding that "Together we can do what I cannot do alone!"
