Under Title 19, section 1467, of the United States Code (19 U.S.C 1467), CBP has a right to examine any shipment exported from the United States and it is important to know that you, the importer, must bear the cost of such cargo exams. Per the CBP regulations, it is the responsibility of the importer or exporter to make the goods available for examination. "The importer shall bear any expense involved in preparing the merchandise for CBP examination and in the closing of the packages" (19 C.F.R. 151.6). Household effects are not exempt. No distinction is made between commercial and personal shipments.

In the course of normal operation, CBP does not charge for cargo examination. However, there is still cost involved.

For example, if your shipment is selected for examination, it will generally be moved to a Centralized Examination Station (CES) for the CBP exam to take place. A CES is a privately operated facility where merchandise is made available to CBP officers for physical examination. The CES facility will unload (devan) your shipment from its shipping container and will reload it after the exam. The CES will bill you for their services. There are also costs associated with moving the cargo to and from the exam site, storage, and ocean carrier's demurrage fees. CES facilities are discussed in part 118 of the Customs Regulations.

Ocean freight is not insured by default without a separate dedicated marine insurance policy. Owner of the cargo is subject to A General Average (GA) clause in case of GA claim, e.g. due to jettison, storm, fire, flood, or other unforeseen event of distress.
