

SPECIALIZED TRAINING FOR LAW ENFORCEMENT

BODY LANGUAGE FOR LAW ENFORCEMENT

This class was designed to provide law enforcement with a detailed understanding of non-verbal communication. The course dispels body language myths and provides an in-depth analysis of non-verbal behavior. Upon completion of this course attendees will understand the importance of recognizing a baseline and what messages may be conveyed by different body movements.

The instructor, Sean Grogan, is a police officer and canine handler in his 12th year in the state of New Jersey with almost 7 years experience as a narcotics detective. He has been certified as a trainer by the Body Language Institute after receiving extensive training in Virginia. Sean Grogan is also the first and currently only law enforcement officer in the United States that is a licensed Paul Ekman Associate.

Some of the benefits of Body Language for Law Enforcement:

- Enhance officer safety
- Improve interview skills
- Increase ability to recognize truthfulness
- Ability to articulate description of body language for reports
- Enhance communication with the public
