

Worldly Values vs. Viruses

Since we are in the thicket of change, I thought it would be a good idea to write about these particular times in America that are reshaping history. One way or another, we are in a state of flux, upheaval and bedlam. Many would think the world is going stir crazy and there is no end in sight. As much as I would like to agree, a little voice inside keeps saying that we are at the end of an era. We are finally ready to make decisions that are being handed to us from unacceptable circumstances as a people. I see our country as finally reaching a state of saying "We're not going to take it anymore", until we all see that rioting is a virus in itself. It spreads like wildfire to other parts of the country and in this world, it has to take something very big to shake up society at just the right time. That time is now.

For years we have seen so much injustice – and much of that has not been seen – yet on a huge energetic frequency level, all is being unveiled. When crimes committed continue to be witnessed, the people have a voice. This goes beyond government interference, and the voice of the people rises in the air to change life as we've known it.

COVID-19 is not gone, yet people came out anyway and protested to show their support (one way or another) for George Floyd, but is it really all about him? Was he the conduit for a country ready to lash back for justice? Could this be because people are tired of watching behind the scenes and not being heard? I've always said that anger is sadness unheard. We are watching this before our very eyes as groups of peaceful marches and destruction are all saying it is happening for the same reason. No matter what our answers and opinions are, it is happening. CHANGE must occur to clearly be the new norm... And the people will make sure of it.

Inside each of us there is a voice that has been snuffed out, unheard, and unloved. The past has dominated the actions and reactions of our own personal growth. From my perspective, I see that this voice isn't going to be silenced anymore. The only way one heals is through listening to that inner voice and paying attention to it. It is what makes us whole and unafraid. If we don't take chances and surrender to an old authority that was an illusion in the first place, we will never get out of the matrix. However, "DO NO HARM FIRST" is a Universal Law that must remain intact in order for there to be a productive outcome. If this is not listened to or understood, then the outcome we wish for will take more time to accomplish.

What are we learning from all of this? In the long and short of it: racism will not be acceptable in a world that is uniting. Judgment is a past way of living that has shown its ugly head long enough, and we the people will make sure that somehow, some way, there will be a new day at hand. This is a very tough time in our world. What we must remember is that life is precious, and to be grateful for the days we have to make a difference, and whether we are silent or vocal, our hearts' internal feelings will always shine first. That little internal voice is not so little after all. It is the intuition, the real deal, and the truth by which we can change the world... one person at a time.

I wish us all peace, prosperity, unity, compassion and mostly love as we are being challenged to witness the greatest love of all happening right before our eyes. You matter, we matter, every soul matters. Stay strong, stay safe, and know that a NEW DAY is upon us.

My deepest love and blessings to ALL of us!
