

Optional Ways to Play and Other ideas

SoundTrak!™ The Music Game is the type of game where you can pretty much make up your own rules and ways to play. The official instructions are mostly guidelines anyway.

Here are a few ideas...

- Some people don't like dancing, or are so skilled at dancing that they will embarrass the other players...take out the Dance Off and Dance Party cards
- Everybody plays music for every round and ignores the designated number of players challenged
- The player whose turn it is to pick the card, picks 3 random cards and chooses the one card they like the best as the play. The cards not played are returned to the deck to await their turn
- Don't be afraid to challenge the judge. If the group thinks a better choice of music was played than the one chosen as winner, award a Groupie card to the player who played a better tune. They'll appreciate getting a groupie and groupies are fun. But that's another story...
- Use the Groupies (well, that goes without saying...) to award to the winner of the round instead of the game card
- Bring your own personal Bluetooth compatible speaker to add some volume
- If you don't have a speaker, an easy option that works well is to use a bowl to project the sound. Place the phone in the bowl but remove any food or liquid first
- SoundTrak!™ The Music Game can be played with any music streaming service that you subscribe to or any other source available to all
- Have the winner explain why they chose that song or music, there could be a good story or memory that can, and should be shared
