Executive summary

The Report of the Immigration Advisory Council (IAC) represents a collection of inputs from every corner of the province on immigration programs and policy. It is a call to action to advance Manitoba's economic prosperity and continue our legacy as a leader in immigration.

Manitoba acknowledges a significant challenge to fill vacancies and retain employees across sectors. There is a call for global talent of varying skills from all backgrounds and around the world to bolster economic development in the province.

The Honourable Minister Jon Reyes and the Honourable Dr. Lloyd Axworthy co-chaired a council of experts to develop this report, informed by robust stakeholder engagement from across the province. The IAC met in person and virtually with stakeholders representing business, government, community and immigrants.

This report lays out recommendations aligned with the IAC's three mandates: attract immigrants to Manitoba, streamline the Manitoba Provincial Nominee Program (MPNP) and enhance settlement services.

- 1. Recruitment: The current level of recruitment is not sufficient to meet the demands of the labour market in Manitoba or for the economic prosperity of the province. Expanding recruitment means collaborating with the federal government and maximizing all available immigration pathways and programs. Recruitment also means increasing marketing efforts to attract immigrants.
- 2. Streamlining the MPNP and balancing needs: This recommendation area explores ways to better align the MPNP with labour market needs. Further, streamlining the program means making it accessible to a broader range of applicants. It also means working with stakeholders like communities, businesses and investors to make the process more straightforward.
- 3. Settlement and retention: Investing in settlement and retention is key to sustainable economic development. Settlement services and enhancing resources that integrate newcomers, such as employment programming and foreign credential recognition, all factor in.

Through collaboration with the federal government, industry, entrepreneurs and established immigrant communities in the province, we can improve outcomes for all.

More immigration to Manitoba means strengthening our communities, our culture of entrepreneurship and business success in the province. By expanding immigration and enhancing integration, we will realize the mutual benefits of helping people build lives in Canada while growing our population and meeting labour market needs.

The recommendations within the report support Manitoba's Skills, Talent and Knowledge Strategy. By examining ways to improve the entire process of immigration to Manitoba, the province will increase the number of workers with the right skills, talent and knowledge to enjoy a high quality of life and grow the provincial economy.

A Message from The Honourable Lloyd Axworthy, Co-chair of the Immigration Advisory Council

This report on immigration and refugee policy for Manitoba is the outcome of an important exercise in mapping out a course for the province to meet one of the most significant social and economic developments facing this generation. The migration surge affecting all parts of the globe equals the challenges presented by other existential trends such as climate change, epidemics and human security. It does, however, present Manitobans with opportunities to promote growth, meet labour market demands, and enrich the dynamic, diverse nature of our population. This will require changes in policy and practice that can reshape the way in which we recruit, receive, settle and distribute the newcomers who choose to come here.

One of the crucial decisions for Manitobans is how to fit provincial policy with the recent announcement of the federal government that aims at a 500,000 annual intake of newcomers. This expanded target calls on us to adjust and enhance our nominee program. The report's recommendation that the province aim at accepting the percentage equivalent to our share of the national populace is a good starting point for consideration by the Government, recognizing that this will require additional resources.

The report also includes a number of very practical recommendations on fixes to various practices to improve efficiency and processing. There is also a strong emphasis on the need to have a more extensive outreach with municipalities throughout the province to meet labour market demands in all regions. And there are suggestions on ways to begin eliminating bottlenecks in credentials licensing and international student visas.

The report recognizes that there are some issues needing further attention and that these should include the involvement of the private sector, labour, educational institutions and civil society settlement groups in developing innovative solutions through a partnership model. The recent arrival of thousands of Ukrainian displaced persons has put a spotlight on the need for serious examination of our refugee planning and adaptation systems, particularly in initiating pilot projects for new labour and humanitarian pathways. The idea put forward by the Minister of setting up a new vehicle for managing these emerging issues is welcome and will be eagerly awaited.

I want to thank Minister Reyes for the openness and co-operative spirit with which he managed the Council's work and I applaud members of the Council who gave freely of their time and ideas to this enterprise. I commend the findings to the Premier and Cabinet for immediate action.

Sincerely,

Dr. Lloyd Axworthy PC, CC, OM.
