

Synopsis — The Earriez

Magnus, a mischievous stuffed animal bear, lives an ordinary life in Anisha's cozy bedroom until he overhears a secret bedtime "fictional" story revealing his true identity as one of the Earriez, magical four-eared bear warriors originating from a far away hidden land named Earria. The next day, when a mysterious photo of an Earrie Bear surfacing to earth (from a hidden world) through a glowing green portal atop Mt. Himalaya surfaces in the local newspaper, Magnus and his friends awaken to a destiny far beyond toys to find their true heritage.

Together, they embark on a fantastical journey to find Mt. Himalaya and the portal across vibrant lands—from bustling bazaars and colorful festivals to mystical forests and dangerous mountains—evading danger and forging friendships along the way. Unknown to them, Anisha secretly stows away, determined to join the quest to find the glowing portal deep in the Himalayas.

At a hidden mountain village, the ancient guardians known as the Ketraj recognize the Earriez as the prophesied warriors the Ketraj have worshipped for centuries and that they must help them through the green portal to the hidden land of Earria to reclaim their home that the Lizard King Skayroth has stolen.

Crossing through the shimmering portal, the Earriez unique magical powers awaken and in the enchanted jungle, with Anisha's courage guiding them they traverse through perils and puzzles.

Meeting enchanted creatures and cultures along the way. The team prepares to face the malevolent lizard king Skayroth, who rules from his fiery fortress in the red forest inside a volcano.

Alongside an alliance of magical forest creatures, they confront Skayroth's dark forces in a climactic battle where unity, friendship, and belief in magic prove stronger than any spell.

With the forest freed and worlds forever linked, some Earriez stay to rebuild, while others return to Anisha's bedroom—no longer mere toys but true defenders of two worlds, bound by adventure, heart, and hope.
