

PhotoArts Journal

Greetings!

Fall is upon us in the midwest. The rich and luscious colors of the leaves are an inspiration to me. I never tire of seeing the gorgeous shades of gold, orange and red.

Over the weekend we took a road trip to Door County and mother nature did not disappoint. Sunny, blue skies accompanied us on Saturday and Sunday. Unknown to us when we planned our getaway, Sister Bay was in full swing, celebrating their Fall Festival. Peninsula State Park was Full. No parking, no overlook to the Green Bay panorama. So we did what all good road trippers do…wing it. We drove to Gill's Rock, checked out a couple watering holes along the way and bought a cherry pie. We returned to the parks on Sunday and experienced the awesome EagleTower observation deck with a birds eye view.

This month's image, "Wild Wild West" is composed of approximately 75 Photoshop layers. The photos on the left are used in the composition. Can you find them in the finished piece above? The artwork is part of my ongoing project that combines and visualizes field notes and photographs with my love for color, pattern and the great outdoors. Birds in flight, wind through the trees, horses grazing in the golden light of late afternoon. I enjoy "pasting" together new stories from prior experience.

You still have time to see the exhibit, "The Air We Breathe". I will be hanging all the pieces at it's new home, Oasis Cafe, on Monday, November 2nd. Until then, see the entire exhibit at New Health Chiropractic, 2690 Research Park Dr #J, Fitchburg, WI.

Until next month, all best wishes,

~Sue~

https://suemerrittphotography.com

suemerrittphotography@gmail.com to message me with questions or be removed from PhotoArts Journal newsletter.