

WHO WE ARE

“Angel and Jules for Others,” a 501c (3) New Jersey nonprofit, is striving to help bar and restaurant workers.

In the wake of the recent pandemic known as COVID-19, New Jersey workers and families have suddenly been confronted with extraordinary difficulties. With regard to workers in the service/hospitality industry, it hit especially close to home for Angel and Jules for Others. The mandatory closure of bars and restaurants, except for carryout and delivery, has effectively eliminated the income of those workers and threatens to devastate any stability in their lives.

For those who do not know, the creators of Angel and Jules for Others have been in the service industry for more than 50 years collectively and, in an effort to assist others, established the “Angel and Jules for Others” in 2010 and has hosted numerous successful benefits for veterans, police, fire, animal rescue, and individual support. Now they need to help their own.

FAMILY

CURRENTLY

With the mandatory closures, many service workers, not just those at Beacon 70, have lost all of the income they need to provide for their families. For Angel and Jules, they lost all the income to their household, so they understand what everyone is going through at this time.

“I work with so many amazing individuals in this industry. Single moms, college students trying to pay their way through school, career servers, and bartenders who have made a life for themselves in this industry and couples like Angel and I who are in this together. I can tell you at this moment we are all in trouble.” Jules

Jules, and her other half of over 20 years, Angel are commonly known as Angel and Jules. Angel is a career bartender, with more than 30 years under his belt, and Jules has served, managed, and bartended for more than 20. Those who know them know they love being behind the bar. Angel and Jules are both Bartenders at Beacon 70 in Brick NJ. They have worked the same shifts, behind the same bar, for almost 3 years now; since Beacon 70 first opened its doors. Jules has worked in many restaurants and says Beacon 70 is different in so many ways. Primarily, Beacon 70 staff have the support of an amazing management team and ownership who truly cares enough to treat all of its staff like family. It goes beyond this though, because apart from this all of them truly are one big FAMILY! Whether you are part of management, FOH, or BOH, they all genuinely look out for and care for one another. With the new year, our Beacon 70 family suffered a tragic loss when one of their Beacon family members passed away. They have all been mourning this loss and trying their best to support each other, despite their sorrow and pain. In the wake of the recent pandemic, it has become apparent that their suffering is only going to intensify from this point forward. When they all thought it couldn't get any worse, they have been proven wrong.

Most of the Beacon 70 staff spent the past couple days fighting the constant crash of the unemployment website to file for their benefits. However, Jules noted that, “while I can’t speak for anyone else, I can say that for myself, the unemployment website listed my weekly benefit amount would be $200. For those of you in this industry, you know that’s not even a fraction of what our earnings would be and it’s certainly not enough to keep our household safe.

I know if we are struggling with this so is the rest of my Beacon 70 family as well as so many other service industry workers across the state of NJ. I spent a lot of time today trying to figure out how I can help, how WE can help in any way possible.”

While searching the web and looking to see what assistance is available, there are other non-profits in California, Washington, Georgia, Texas, NY and Oregon raising funds to help provide emergency grants to service workers in their area.

Here in NJ, there is not much available. With more than 70% of the state workers being in the service/hospitality industry we need to help them as best we can.

Beacon 70 New Years Eve 2020

Angel and Jules for Others is launching this campaign to assist those service industry workers in NJ so that, in the coming weeks, we may offer emergency grants to those in need here in our state.

To do this WE NEED YOUR HELP! While you were all home on this 2020 St. Patrick's Day, think how much you missed going to your local pub or bar, how much you missed those social gatherings at a variety of NJ bars and restaurants then think of your local bartenders and servers who need you now more than ever!

HOW YOU CAN HELP

You can visit our website at ANGELANDJULES.COM if you would like to donate.

We need to work collectively to raise funds and I ask all of you to PLEASE share.

I will be applying to as many corporations as I can to seek assistance for service workers in NJ. Together we will get through this and we will do all we possibly can to help.
