She has worked multiple anime and gaming conventions throughout the U.S. and completed various contracted efforts for internet patrons.

Her foray into the art world as an independent artist along with her love of history, and her innate curiosity about all things science has combined to give her a never-ending love and respect for art and a desire to work to preserve and restore the human expression of artistic works exposed to the ravages of time. She's currently seeking to complete a degree that will allow her to pursue all these passions as an art conservationist.
