

DILLY-DALLY IN NATURE

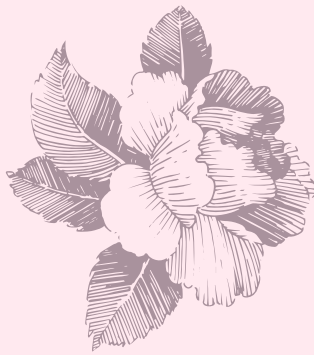

at Sweetwater Farms
Bonita, CA 91902

OUR MISSION

This type of outdoor education program presents a unique nature-based early childhood education approach. The program introduces children to nature's classroom on a working farm and helps children learn to connect with nature. With a daily rhythm, the class incorporates nature-based exploration; authentic imaginary play, crafting, teatime, storytelling and building a variety of developmentally appropriate skills. Outdoor play also enhances brain development and strengthens fine and gross motor skills. With the farm serving as our classroom, students immerse themselves in a whole-body sensory experience that gives them a deeper connection with hands-on learning within nature on a working farm.

TEACHER BIO

Kimberly Sabiston is originally from Long Island, NY where she grew along the shores of the Great South Bay. Growing up Kimberly and her family enjoyed weekend camping and boating trip to Fire Island, NY. This is where her father instilled his love and fascination of nature within his three daughters. Kimberly, then went on to study elementary education with a minor in biology at SUNY Cortland and then received her master's degree in biology education at SUNY Stonybrook. While living in California for the past 5 years, Kimberly has become a certified California Master Naturalist through UC Davis Extension and studied Forest Kindergarten Teacher Training through Antioch University at Santa Barbara. Also, she has enjoyed taking many Life-Ways Waldorf Education online courses to continue her education journey. Kimberly has taught forest school classes as summer courses at Francis Parker School for the past four summers and has been a classroom teacher for over ten years. Her true love is; the joy in sharing her passion and wonder of nature with her students and her son, Easton.
