So we had a scary ER trip last week with our son Coltston. Freak fall, tripping over his own foot, on the porch. He hit the top of his head on the corner of the smoker grill.

When we arrived, staff was kind and helpful. This is by no means against them, but this experience needs to be shared, because it was the perfect example at just how easily parents are UNinformed, frauded from the truth, and manipulated into procedures just simply because doctors can.

It's disgusting and disgraceful.

If you know me, you know we no longer vaccinate, I don't keep that a secret.

Becoming informed about the truth of vaccines was the best thing I've ever done for our kids. Not one regret.

The kids have never been sick, which fortunately means they've never seen a doctor, health wise. But accidents and injuries happen. Especially with boys.

Coltston was awake, coherent, and acting normal. No signs of a concussion, he didn't even cry, but there was just so much blood it took me by surprise. I knew he was more than likely going to need stitches. I cleaned the wound and applied gauze to his head and raced to the ER.

Entering into our room as I sat down on the hospital bed, holding him, not only did I have to stress worry about the severity of his injury, but I knew I would have to go into full defense mode here soon, because I know what's coming. And sure enough, it did.

Nurse, takes vitals, asks standard medical information.

"Allergies?"

"No ma'am,"

"Allergic to any medications?"

"None that we no of,"

"Up to date on shots?"

Boom, there it was..

"No ma'am" I replied.

"Last ones?"

"When he was 2 months, and now we no longer vaccinate."

"Pediatrician?"

"Don't have one."

Finishes, exits

Phew. Ok, good deal. Deep breath.

Enters Doctor, and asks the same questions as the nurse.

Dr. - "So, is he up to date on his vaccines?"

Me - "No sir, we do not vaccinate."

That defense mode I was talking about? Yeah. Activate.

He looks at me like they all do. Full eye contact, and an eyebrow raised with "concern."

Me - "After the reaction to his two month shots, that caused him to stop breathing, I did research myself of the risks, dangers and how unnecessary they are, so we no longer do. "

Dr. - "Is that so." "Who's the pediatrician?"

Me - "We do not have one."

*looks at me again

Dr. - "So, no pediatrician?"

Me - "Correct...We were denied care, because he's "too healthy"."

Dr. - "So no vaccines at all?"

Me - " That is correct...."

At this point I'm irritated, thinking, can we drop this? and you look at the hole in my son's head please?!

Dr.- "Well we have a pediatrician on staff, so I'm going to get her to step in here with us."

Enters Doctor with Pediatrician. And to note, never looks at Coltston, she just stands in the corner

Dr. - "Ok, so how you do feel about Tetanus? because he's going to have to have that."

There it was. The moment I knew was coming. So, here we go..

Me- "That most definitely is not happening. For one, we don't have any cows on our property, for the possibility of the corner of our grill to have been sitting in any cow manure, for Tetanus to even exist to begin with.

2. As you can see his wound is literally bleeding? And once the wound bleeds, the oxygen automatically kills any Tetani that would form by the rare chance it even existed.

3. In order for the Tetanus shot to even be effective, he would have needed it 2-3 weeks ago, before this. And giving it to him now would be completely pointless?

4. Tetanus is not just "Tetanus," it's a combination shot, DTap, and that's what stopped his breathing before, so no. We're not doing it."

He paused and looked oddly impressed.

"Well, You are correct."

Then continues about options with either stitches or gluing the wound.

So BACK UP. Did you read that? Reread it.

"You ARE correct."

I just stated the shot was UNnecessary, INeffective, and a risk! He knew that, AND YET he still had every intention of giving our son DTap (Tetanus) anyway.

Especially even after I just stated about his reaction to DTap? He was still willingly going to inject our son with the same life threatening poison again??

I stated it was COMPLETELY POINTLESS, He KNEW all about the very info I said, yet he was still going to give it to him.

Excuse me, DO WHAT??

If that doesn't make your blood boil, you missed the whole point.

Say I didn't know any of the information I do about vaccines. Say I am just like most parents, and have very little to no understanding of any of it. And I just 100% trusted this doctor...He was dishonest, and withheld valuable, CRITICAL information from me?

Sadly this is the normal...That is why medical error is the 3rd leading cause of death in the U.S. (before the PLandemic)

That's why it's called a PRACTICE.

Not everything is open heart surgery, you have access to the same information doctors do.

Do not be afraid to stand up or speak out! Or ask, and I'll come with you!

Research, ask questions, and get informed!

Raising Hale about the Risks

P.S. Coltston is just fine, he was just boarder-line of needing stitches. We just got it glued right up.
