

MARCH Facts

March is named after Mars, the Roman god of war.

This was the time of year to resume military campaigns that had been interrupted due to winter.

DAYLIGHT SAVINGS TIME

The idea of aligning waking hours to daylight hours to conserve candles was first conceptualized in 1784 by American polymath Benjamin Franklin. In a satirical letter to the editor of The Journal of Paris, Franklin suggested that waking up earlier in the summer would economize on candle usage and calculated considerable savings.[3][4] In 1895, New Zealand entomologist and astronomer George Hudson proposed the idea of changing clocks by two hours every spring to the Wellington Philosophical Society.[5] In 1907, British resident William Willett presented the idea as a way to save energy. After some serious consideration, it was not implemented.[6]

DAYLIGHT SAVING TIME

In 1908, Port Arthur in Ontario, Canada (today merged into Thunder Bay), started using DST. [7][8] Starting on 30 April 1916, the German Empire and Austria-Hungary each organized the first nationwide implementation in their jurisdictions. Many countries have used DST at various times since then, particularly since the 1970s energy crisis. DST is generally not observed near the Equator, where sunrise and sunset times do not vary enough to justify it. Some countries observe it only in some regions: for example, parts of Australia observe it, while other parts do not; conversely, it is not observed at some places at high latitudes because there are wide variations in sunrise and sunset times and a one-hour shift would relatively not make much difference at all. The United States observes it, except for the states of Hawaii and Arizona (within the latter, however, the Navajo Nation observes it, conforming to federal practice).[9] A minority of the world's population uses DST—Asia, Africa, and Latin America and the Caribbean generally do not.
