SURFSIDE
TOMORROW

A Surfside Thanksgiving: Feasting on Truth Amidst a Smorgasbord of Corruption

This Thanksgiving, the people of Surfside gathered together to celebrate and be thankful. But there are some problems in our town that we shouldn't forget...

Surfside Tomorrow is here to share some important truths about what's going on in our town.

Lets start with the appetizer:

While many sit at their tables, thanking for the year's blessings, Commissioner Nelly Velasquez, a master of selective opposition, has been busy garnishing her political career with the herbs of hypocrisy. She has been a vocal critic, particularly against Vice Mayor Jeffrey Rose, but her critique is as selective as the choice of a Thanksgiving turkey – only picking what suits her taste, leaving behind a trail of political maneuvering and confrontational public meetings. It's a dish that reeks of personal agenda, leaving a bitter taste in the mouths of Surfside residents who crave genuine leadership.

Moving on to the main course:

We have Former Mayor Charles Burkett. His term in office was like an overcooked turkey – dry, hard to swallow, and leaving everyone thirsty for real leadership. His political tactics, filled with public disputes and bitter rivalries, especially with Commissioner Eliana Salzhauer, turned the town commission into a circus rather than a council working for the people. His TeamSurfside blog, a platform he claims to deliver the "news you won't see in the Surfside Gazette," is more akin to stuffing filled with personal vendettas than nourishing information. The allegations of Burkett being a slumlord and his inappropriate comments to a female police officer are the rotten cranberries in our community's Thanksgiving feast.

And for dessert, we cannot forget Commissioner Marianne Meisheid. The mere association and alignment with figures like Burkett and Velasquez raise questions. Is she another layer in this trifling trifle of deceit and mismanagement? Surfside residents deserve a clear and transparent serving of her role and intentions in our town's governance.

This Thanksgiving, as we reflect on what we're thankful for, let's also remember the feast of facts we must digest to better our community. The overindulgence of Burkett's do-nothing policies, Velasquez's selective opposition, and the to-be-revealed ingredients of Meisheid's contributions, make for a meal that demands a closer inspection. It's time to carve through the facade and get to the real meat of their actions and intentions.

Surfside Tomorrow pledges to be the carving knife, slicing through the layers of deception and serving the residents of Surfside with the nutritious truth they deserve.

We stand as vigilant watchdogs, ensuring that the next Thanksgiving isn't marred by the same unsavory characters and their undercooked policies.

Happy Thanksgiving, Surfside - let's feast on truth and justice.
