A Note From Rick: More of the same from markets this week at TLA. I feel like a broken record when I say that, but I guess that's a good thing. Butcher cows were steady to slightly stronger again this week. The calf market was stronger as well, which has become a normal thing over the last six weeks. Not sure where these markets are going to top out, but we're seeing prices higher than ever week after week. It still boils down to the basics of supply and demand, which is what creates the pricing in any market, and we are seeing extremes in all areas. Seems to me like it's going to be this way for the immediate future anyways with Spring right around the corner. Hope to see you soon at TLA!!
