A Note from Rick: This was another good week for markets at TLA. I know it seems like I say that over & over like a broken record, but it's important to recognize how consistent these strong prices have been for all of the markets at TLA. They have not always been that way, and I'm sure they won't last forever. Prices on Tuesday were slightly higher in all the markets. Butcher cows & calves are the two that stand out to me; both of these markets have seen considerable gains over the last few weeks and continue to inch higher. The Special Springer Sale on Thursday was considerably higher as well, compared to a month ago. This market has been steady over the last 6 to 8 months, but there have been some slight ups & downs from one month to the next. The demand for top quality springers & fresh cows is very good. I don't see this changing anytime soon with beef prices being this strong & the ongoing lack of good cattle available on the market. We had a taste of Spring & then bounced right back to Winter. Hopefully this cold weather will be short lived. Have a great week!
