A Note from Rick: Markets were steady this week at TLA. Nothing in particular stood out to me as a highlight his week. Across the board, markets keep doing more of the same. Butcher cows & calves are in high demand, producing very strong prices; that's been happening for most of 2024. More recently, dairy cattle of all ages have followed along the same lines. I feel a bit like a broken record from week to week, but this whole situation is one that I don't think we've ever seen before. I look for this to continue as cattle numbers just aren't out there, especially Holstein heifers. This isn't something that can be corrected in the near future. There is so much beef on dairy breeding going on that Holstein heifer calves that are for sale are nearly non-existent. In my opinion, there aren't even enough Holstein heifer calves available to create a true market. They should be worth as much as, or more than bull calves according to the price of yearlings. Have a great week & we hope to see you soon at TLA!
