A Note from Rick: Markets were slightly stronger this week at TLA. The calf market was a little stronger this week again, and butcher cows were steady to stronger. We're seeing smaller runs of cattle week to week, which is typical for this time of year. The lower numbers along with the strong demand is keeping prices very stable & pushing them even higher in a lot of cases. The last couple weeks of decent weather has pretty well wrapped up 1st cutting hay for a lot of people. From what I've heard, it's been a plentiful crop so far. It will be interesting to see what hay prices do now that we have new crop hay being made. We aren't seeing much hay through the sale to really test the market, which again, is very typical for this time of year. Have a great week & we'll see you soon at TLA!!
