A Note from Rick: Markets continue to be very strong at TLA. This week the calf market was stronger again. Feeder cattle prices are through the roof and it is starting to trickle into the calf market more and more. I look for this to continue as we head into the Fall. We haven't had a lot of feeders lately to test the market, but everything that I have heard and read about is very strong. Prices just keep creeping higher all the way through the beef market. Dairy cattle prices are starting to move higher as a result of this as well. There has been a slower reaction on the dairy cattle because of such poor milk prices over the last several months. We've had some more widespread timely rain that will really boost the 2023 crops. Sure looks to me like we're in for above average yields in most prices throughout the Midwest. Have a great week and enjoy the mild summer weather! See you at TLA!
