A Note from Rick: Markets were steady for the most part at TLA after last week's jump in prices throughout several categories. The big question to me this week was how were markets going to respond after last week's jump in prices. The answer was positive, as for the most part prices were pretty consistent throughout the day. The hay market is one that I haven't talked about in a while and we are starting to get more and more hay coming in over the last few weeks. Prices haven't really changed much throughout the summer. The top end of the market is ranging from $200-$240 with the majority of the hay ranging from $140-$180. It's been a good season for making hay in the general area and there seems to be a good volume of hay available so it will be interesting to see if this market will change locally. Hay prices in the west are considerably stronger with the severe drought that has hit certain areas. Freight costs are extremely high and that is playing a big part in moving hay around the country. We are looking forward to selling again in the horse arena with a Driving Horse auction on Saturday. September is going to be busy with the Labor Day Pony Auction, Northern Indiana Yearling Speed Sale and The Morgan Classic and on to October! See you at TLA.
