A Note from Rick: Nothing really exciting to report from Tuesday's sale, just more of the same in all markets. The hay market is something I haven't mentioned in a while & we are getting quite a bit more hay in than we normally do this time of year. Prices are struggling a bit compared to last Winter, but that's to be expected. The better-quality hay is ranging from $150 - $200/ton. Coarse or grass hay has been ranging from $100 - $150/ton. There seems to be quite a bit of hay around locally & the demand is not very strong at this time. I used the term locally, because something that has changed in the hay market over the last few years is the cost of transportation. It's a lot more expensive to move hay & straw very far & that has made a big difference in prices from one area to the next. Have a great week & stay cool!! We will see you soon at TLA!
