A Note from Rick: Markets steady at TLA this week. Nothing really stood out to me on Tuesday as big market news to report. All of the markets have been really steady for the last couple weeks and the demand for stock seems to be keeping up with supply. Hard to believe it's September already and the summer is pretty much gone. We've been very busy in the office during the month of August preparing for the big Fall schedule in the horse arena. Things are falling into place nicely for what looks to be a very exciting Fall. We started things off last Saturday with the Driving Horse Auction. The sale went very well and prices were very strong for the most part. The horse market in general continues to be very strong and shows very few signs of backing up. Prices have jumped considerably over the last couple years. It seems to me they are stable where they are currently at and I look for that to continue. See you at TLA!
