A Note from Rick: Markets were steady and softer this week at TLA. The calf market definitely stands out this week as the market that made the most change. Prices were considerably lower for all calves. I'm not sure exactly what to think of this, as prices have been slowly weakening over the last several weeks. Calf numbers have been quite a bit stronger throughout the Midwest. With the cattle prices slipping back quite a bit on the Board of Trade, there is some added pressure on the demand side. With the supply being stronger and the demand a little weaker, we've got lower prices. This could be a short lived correction in the market. Feed prices have fallen way off and cattle prices are still pretty high. I don't see the calf market falling much more. Dairy cattle, fat cattle and butcher cows were all steady and continue to have very strong prices. Fall is going to be a busy place at TLA and we are excited about the upcoming sales.
