Raindrops are shaped more like hamburger buns. Air flow on the bottom of the water drop is greater than the airflow at the top. At the top, small air circulation disturbances create less air pressure. The surface tension at the top allows it to remain more spherical while the bottom gets more flattened out.

Ancient Romans consumed so much olive oil they were overrun with empty pots. Oil in the bottom of pots turned rancid making them single use. Monte Testaccio still stands today and is 45 ft. underground, 150 ft. tall, and filled with 80 million shards of broken pots from centuries ago.
