Cozy Up To The Table This Winter With Family Game Night!

Feeling disconnected from members of your own family lately? You're not alone - a 2018 study by 72 Point for Visit Anaheim found that 60% of parents with kids between 4 and 18 described their daily lives as "hectic." Sadly, the survey also found that today's families only spend about 37 minutes of quality time together per weekday. Between digital distractions and our often over-scheduled lives, even sitting down for dinner together can feel like a miracle to pull off, especially as children head toward the tween and teen years.

WHAT'S A SOLUTION? GATHER AROUND THE TABLE!

Set aside the gadgets and gather around the table together for a good old-fashioned family game night. Even if you start out with a monthly game night with the kids, chances are it will soon be popular enough to enjoy more often. Putting your family's game night on the calendar will ensure everyone keeps their schedules clear for a night of fun - and connection - all together.

Today's games provide a huge range of choices to suit any age range, interests or gaming styles, so there's truly something for every family to explore and enjoy together. The added benefits will astound you: Kids can learn important lessons about sportsmanship and fair play, develop communication and collaboration skills, increase their fine motor, logic and strategic thinking abilities - and have a blast doing it. When was the last time you all just let loose and enjoyed laughing and being silly together? There's no better way for kids and parents to relax and have fun together than a game that brings out the best in everyone.

Here are some examples of how games can boost specific skills, while also providing plenty of giggles and excitement.

TEST YOUR KNOWLEDGE, QUICK THINKING AND CREATIVITY

A game that's always up-to-date, kNOW! uses the latest technology to help test the brain power of three to six players, ages 10 and up. Games go way beyond trivia - there are also puzzles such as identifying a sound provided by Google Assistant, or creating a question to ask Google Assistant to prompt it to say a provided word or phrase. This fast-moving game provides constantly changing questions depending on where and when you play.

ENJOY THE WICKED SIDE OF STRATEGY

For a fun twist on everyone's favorite movies, Disney Villainous: Evil Comes Prepared allows two to six players age 12 and up to choose a sinister character to play: Scar from "The Lion King," Ratigan from "The Great Mouse Detective," or Yzma from "The Emperor's New Groove." Players put strategy and logic to the test to achieve their own diabolical goals - and stop other villains from completing their own dastardly objectives. Games like Disney Villainous are especially fun because they can be expanded and played with other characters in the series. Players can choose from a treasure trove of villains including Maleficent, the Queen of Hearts, Ursula and more.

CREATE SUSPENSE WHILE WORKING COOPERATIVELY

JAWS brings the classic movie and infamous shark to life in your very own living room. In this asymmetric, two-act board game, one player takes the role of the shark while others take on the parts of Chief Brody, Quint and Hooper and work together to defeat their toothy foe. For two to four players ages 12 and up, play JAWS to recreate the excitement and tension of the blockbuster film as a family!

BOOST PROBLEM-SOLVING AND SMALL MOTOR SKILLS

A brain-bending game for all generations, Invasion of the Cow Snatchers is an 'out of this world' introduction to playing games at different levels of skill while challenging players as they learn how to follow directions and maneuver their flying saucer around obstacles. Though designed to be a one-player game, others can join in on the fun too by collaborating to solve puzzles together and taking turns being the magnetic "UFO."

Schedule a family game night and turn that 37 minutes into an entire hour or more! This holiday season is a perfect opportunity to turn off the phones for an hour or two, put some hot chocolate on the stove and stock up on some of the newest games that your kids will love to play. Enjoy hanging out together this winter, and reconnecting as a family.

VAST MAJORITY of Americans LOSE SLEEP to BINGE-WATCH TV

(BPT) - A new survey from the American Academy of Sleep Medicine (AASM) found that 88% of U.S. adults admitted to losing sleep due to staying up late to watch multiple episodes of a TV show or streaming series - and this number jumps to 95% when looking at 18- to 44-year-olds.

The same survey shows that Americans rank sleep as their second most important priority, following family. But actions speak louder than words, and it's not just TV shows that are taking precedence over sleep. Two-thirds of adults have lost sleep due to reading, 75% of men have lost sleep watching sporting events, and 72% of those aged 18-34 have put video games ahead of bedtime.

"Choosing to binge on entertainment at night instead of sleeping has serious ramifications," said AASM President Dr. Kelly A. Carden. "Sleep is essential to health, well-being and safety, and chronic insufficient sleep can lead to an increased risk of health problems, mood disorders and motor vehicle accidents."

Here are a few tips to help binge-watch responsibly: Set an episode limit. Commit to a specific number of episodes at the beginning of your watching session. To decide how many episodes you can fit in, determine your bedtime. The AASM recommends adults get seven or more hours of sleep for optimal health. Use this bedtime calculator to find out when you need to go to bed based on your wake time.

Get out of the "auto-play" loop. Many streaming services will automatically launch episodes one after another to ensure you keep watching. This makes it easy to think "OK, one more episode," leading to late nights and sleepy mornings. Check settings to turn off the "auto-play" and ensure you are consciously choosing when to continue watching, and when to power off for bed.

Make time on the weekend. If you enjoy streaming for longer periods, set aside part of your weekend to catch up on your favorite shows. Reserving Saturday or Sunday afternoon will provide more time for getting immersed in your shows, while still providing adequate time for sleep.

Filter out blue light at night. If you stream content on a cell phone or tablet, make sure you have altered the device's blue light setting to minimize the alerting effects of screens at night. Bright light, such as that from a mobile device, sends signals to your brain that indicate you should be awake. This can make it difficult to fall asleep. Adjust your screen's brightness in the evening and avoid any electronics at least 30 minutes before bedtime.

Avoid using devices in bed. Streaming from the comfort of bed can also impede your ability to fall asleep. It's best to keep electronics out of the bed so that you associate your bed with sleep when you lay down at night.

If you are experiencing ongoing sleep problems, talk to your medical provider, who may direct you to the sleep team at an accredited sleep center for help.

For more information and to find a local accredited sleep center, visit www.sleepeducation.org.

Delivered from Amazon Prime in One Day or Less

(BPT) - We all want to find both essentials and fun products easily - with lots of variety - and get them delivered fast, and for free. This summer, spend more time with friends and family and less time shopping. Prime Free One Day ensures members can find last-minute birthday presents, sunscreen and beach towels for an impromptu getaway, as well as closet organizers and cleaning products - all delivered the very next day.

Amazon is in the process of expanding one-day delivery with Amazon Prime. Today, Prime Free One Day is available to members with no minimum purchase amount on more than ten million products, coast to coast. Millions of members are already noticing and enjoying free one-day delivery right to their door, garage and even to their car.

Here are some questions we asked about Prime Free One Day.

WHERE IS PRIME FREE ONE DAY AVAILABLE TODAY?

Prime Free One Day is available on ten million products, coast to coast, and customers across the U.S. may have already noticed expanded one-day selection when they shop. In fact, Amazon customers in thousands of cities and towns across 44 major metropolitan areas already have access to millions of items with free same-day delivery.

WHAT PRODUCTS ARE AVAILABLE FOR ONE-DAY DELIVERY?

Over ten million products are available for one-day delivery and the selection is continually increasing. Amazon's vast selection varies from the best of Amazon entertainment to everyday necessities like diapers, apparel and household items, as well as consumer electronics and more.

HOW IS ONE-DAY DELIVERY MADE POSSIBLE?

Amazon has built its network for more than 20 years, growing it to include 110 fulfillment centers, 40 package sorting centers, 100 delivery stations and 20 air gateways - all to be closer to customers. This network allows the company to deliver orders faster and more efficiently.

WHAT ONE-DAY DELIVERY OPTIONS DOES AMAZON OFFER?

To make delivery even more convenient, Amazon offers multiple package pickup and return options, including Amazon Locker and Amazon pickup locations in towns and cities across the U.S. Other delivery options even include in-garage, in-car and in-home deliveries using Key for Amazon.

Amazon obsesses over making customers' lives easier, better and more fun with Prime. In fact, Amazon customers in thousands of cities and towns across 44 major metropolitan areas already have access to millions of items with free same-day delivery. Simply look for items marked as eligible for delivery today, order before lunch and get them by bedtime. For delivery in a matter of hours, members can also use Prime Now to receive grocery delivery from Whole Foods Market in nearly 90 U.S. metros, or grocery pickup in as little as 30 minutes in 30 metros, with more to come in 2019.

The real estate market is hyperlocal. It's not about what homes are selling for on average nationally or even across the state; it's about what is happening in your neighborhood. I am your local expert and can provide up-to-date information on home values, strategies for buying or selling, and market trends. I have chosen to partner with John L. Scott in part because they are an industry leader that is continually recognized nationally. Together we are committed to providing unparalleled service.
