

18th Intercollegiate Amateur Athletics Association of America Championships

Manhattan Field, New York, NY

May 27, 1893

120-Yard Hurdle Race.—First Heat—Won by McL. Van Ingen, Yale; J. Byrnes, Columbia, second. Time—0:18 2-5. Second Heat—Won by D. Lyman, Yale; O. W. Shead, Harvard, second. Time—0:18. Third Heat—Won by K. Brown, Harvard; C. C. Russell, Amherst, second. Time—0:18 1-5.

Owing to a mistake in placing the posts at the finish the men in the above heats ran 130 yards instead of 120, hence the apparent slowness in time. The mistake was rectified before the following heats were decided. Trial heat for second men won by Russell; Shead and Hart ran a dead heat for second place. Time—0:17 2-5. In the run-off for second place between Shead and Hart the former won. Time—0:17 3-5.

Final Heat—Won by McL. Van Ingen, with Lyman second and Shead third. Time—0:16 2-5.

THE BLUE ONCE MORE ON TOP

YALE'S YOUNG ATHLETES WIN THE INTERCOLLEGIATE GAMES.

A Day of Many Athletic Surprises, and None More Astonished Than the Boys from New-Haven—The Victory Was Wrested from Harvard by Thirteen Points—Jarvis of Wesleyan Proves a Dark Horse in the Mile Run—Van Ingen's Game Finish.

Yale has reason to feel proud of her athletes. They showed a clean pair of heels to all other competitors in the annual intercollegiate field games yesterday afternoon and are the undisputed champions for the coming year.

It was a great victory. Harvard men all were boastful. They claimed over 40 points, and hinted that Yale would be fortunate to secure 30. The New-Haven collegians, however, were rather silent, but when the time came for them to show their mettle they did it in a manner that will long be remembered at Cambridge.

In all the events the wearers of the blue showed great gameness, and, judging from their finishes in several races, they must have been on "edge," as sporting men say when they mean that a man is at his best.

In points, Yale won by a score of 47½ to 34 5-6 for Harvard. The others were beaten away off.

It was a day of surprises. Who predicted that Champion Turner, the half-mile runner, and Champion Bercherling, the walker, would be defeated. Nobody. Their races were looked upon as certainties, but, nevertheless, both had to give way to faster men. Turner was whipped by Corbin of Harvard, while Ottley, a Princeton boy, lowered Bercherling's colors. All calculations were upset by these defeats, and in consequence the Nassau Hall "Tigers" failed to get third place in the race. The University of Pennsylvania stepped in and beat the Princeton boys by one point for the honors.

Yale won yesterday on merits. The boys who were beaten in the Harvard-Yale meeting by the Cambridge athletes did not lose heart. On the contrary the defeats only tended to make them more careful in their preparation and when they faced the starter yesterday they were prepared to give a good account of themselves. Hickock, for instance, who was beaten by Shea in the shot-putting competition, not only won the events yesterday, but he broke all college records. Richards, too, who was whipped in the sprints, outran the man that beat him at Cambridge.

The outside men, as the contestants from the smaller colleges are termed, if anything injured the chances of Yale. In the mile run Morgan was picked out to win, and the pole vault looked like a sure thing for Cartwright, but both men failed, getting only second place. These events were won by Jarvis of Wesleyan and Bucholtz of the University of Pennsylvania. Jarvis was an outsider, and few if any people thought that he would win. On his form at Worcester a few days ago THE TIMES predicted that Jarvis would win the race, and he is the only dark horse that carried off first honors.

There were six first trials, two second trials, and the final heat. Richards of Yale ran both his trials and won handily in 0:10 2-5, and in the final he covered the distance and won in a fifth of a second faster than his trials. Bucholtz of Pennsylvania was second and Baker of Harvard third. This was a pretty race, and Richards won by outstaying the Pennsylvania man. The latter had been vaulting for half an hour, and had won the event with the big pole only about a minute before the final in the sprint started. Notwithstanding that this injured his chances to some extent in the sprint, he made a hard fight and almost won. Bucholtz is a first-class athlete, and he will do well in future contests. If, however, he wants to be successful at running he had better throw aside the field competitions. Many of the spectators who saw Bucholtz perform yesterday think that he can defeat Richards. Bucholtz is one of Pennsylvania's men running under protest.

Four trials were run in the 120-yard hurdle race. Van Ingen of Yale won the first trial and easily won the final, with Lyman of Yale second and Sheard of Harvard third. The trials were all slow, but Van Ingen covered the distance in the final in 0:16 2-5.

In the two-mile safety bicycle race it was necessary to have three heats and a final. In the latter the six starters all took matters very easy and jogged along until a mile and a half had been traversed. Then Coats of Pennsylvania shot out, followed by Glenn of Yale, the favorite. They had a hot time of it, and for a short period the Pennsylvania youth looked like a winner. Glenn, however, kept right on to the finish, and won, after a gallant struggle, in 7:04 3-5. The heats were run in 5:41 4-5, 5:45 2-5, and 5:45 3-5, all beating Brewster's record of 5:47 2-5. The fastest time was made by Glenn in his heat.

L. Sayer of Harvard won the quarter-mile run from Brokaw of Princeton. The latter made a game struggle to breast the tape ahead of the Harvard youth, but Sayer just had strength enough left when the challenge was made to make one final effort that carried him home first. Shaw of Cornell and Bingham of Harvard ran a dead heat for third place. They divided the point, but on the toss the Cornell man won the medal.

The mile run was a pretty race. Morgan, the favorite, went off at a merry clip and headed the procession for the first lap. For a second or two the positions alternated very rapidly, but Morgan was soon in front again. Jarvis kept about a yard behind and paid little or no attention to the spurts. The quarter was covered in 1:05, the half in 2:15, the three-quarters in 3:29. About a furlong from home Jarvis moved up to Morgan's shoulder, but the Yale man quickened his pace and kept in front. A hundred yards further on Jarvis made an effort, but Morgan was ready for him. Jarvis, however, had the speed left and he shot to the front, despite the efforts of the Yale representative. Morgan gamely tried to overtake him, but it was no use, as Jarvis won easily in 4:34 3-5.

Bercherling of Princeton started out to cut the pace in the mile walk and managed to keep in front until about 150 yards from the finish, when Ottley took the lead and drew away from the field at every stride. He walked a magnificent race and won in 6:59 3-5. In private trials Bercherling covered the distance in 6:47, and Endicott of Harvard in 6:48, but they failed to do their work yesterday.

Van Ingen and Garcelon had a close race in the 220-yard hurdle race. The Harvard man looked like a winner until the last hurdle was reached, when he appeared to get out of his stride. Van Ingen gained a trifle and then beat him home in the final spurt on the flat. Just as they finished Van Ingen and Garcelon both fell, and the former injured his head by coming in contact with one of the stanchions of the grand stand. He was carried off the field and a doctor was called to dress the wound. Van Ingen was unconscious for about ten minutes, but when he opened his eyes he asked:

"Did I win?"

"You bet you did, Van," answered one of his college mates.

"Then it's all right," was the response and his face brightened up.

As soon as the pistol went off for the half-mile run Turner went out with the lead, and for a time it looked as though he would distance all the other men. But he didn't. His pace began to tell heavily against him after 600 yards had been covered and Corbin gradually moved up. Turner appeared to weaken on the dash down the straight, and was passed by both Corbin and Hubbell of Harvard. The time was a fifth of a second faster than 2 minutes. Turner, it was thought, showed poor judgment in cutting out the pace, as he should have depended on his spurring powers at the finish to win. He attributes his defeat to an injury received while hurdling in practice last week.

The 220-yard dash was a gift for Richards, who won as he pleased. He whipped Merrill, the Harvard favorite, in his trial.

In the field events Hickok broke the college record with the hammer, Bucholtz created a new record for the vault, and Hickok surpassed all previous college records with the shot. A summary of the events follows:
