CONDITIONS were still considerably unsettled in 1919, but the Armistice had been signed and the colleges were doing everything in their power to restore conditions to normal. Cornell, with a team which was unusually strong in the middle and long distance runs, as well as the two hurdles, scored a comparatively easy victory. Pennsylvania was the runner up with a score of 29 points. Michigan, with a team which scored in seven events, was third with 25½. Harvard was fourth with 23.

One new intercollegiate record was established. This was in the 2-mile run, which Ivan C. Dresser, Cornell, 1919, won in 9 minutes 22⅔ seconds. Two other very good performances were those registered by W. C. Haymond, University of Pennsylvania, 1919, who won both the 100 and 220-yard dashes and K. A. Mayer, Cornell, 1920, who did the same for the quarter and half mile events. Walker Smith, Cornell, 1920, similarly was first in both hurdle races.
