Profile of IC4A Champions - Cover Story:

James Jett, Two Sport Standout at West Virginia

By Bob Welsh, West Virginia Sports Communication

During James Jett's three years on the campus of West Virginia University, he has provided Mountaineer sports fans with a lot of excitement.

Whether hauling in a touchdown pass from former Mountaineer quarterback Major Harris in the 1989 Gator Bowl or sprinting by his competitors on the track to win an IC4A title, Jett has usually found himself smack dab in the center of the action.

The Shenandoah Junction, W. Va., native, who was a football and track star at Jefferson High School, arrived in Morgantown in the fall of 1989 on a football scholarship, but that's not to say that the great track programs around the country were not clamoring for his services.

"I was being recruited for track by such schools as UCLA, Tennessee and Louisiana State," Jett says, "but I really wanted to play football as well. I accepted the football scholarship at WVU under the auspices that I would be allowed to compete in track. Looking back on my decision, I think I made the right college choice.

And, boy, has he ever competed in track! The 21-year-old has established himself as the most prolific trackster to ever run for West Virginia. He is a five-time NCAA All-American (having won his fifth award at this year's indoor championships), has rewritten WVU's sprint records and has more than adequately represented himself in such high-profile meets as the IC4A's, Penn Relays and the Millrose Games.

"If you would have told me in high school that I would be a five-time All-American I would have looked at you a little funny," Jett says with a smile. "Coming out of high school, I was running a 10.6 in the 100 meters; no way did I envision myself at the top."

It didn't take long for Jett to realize that he was close to the top as he posted his first All-America honor as a freshman by placing fifth in the indoor 55 meters. He also posted first-place finishes in the 55- and 200-meter dashes at the indoor IC4As.

"James was nursing some minor bumps and bruises that he sustained during spring football drills and decided that he didn't want to compete during the rest of the track season," WVU track coach Martin Pushkin says. "All in all, though, the football staff has been very good about the whole situation. They realize that there is time for James to compete in both sports."

Jett's sophomore campaign was just as successful as his freshman year as he earned three more All-America honors, taking home honors in the indoor 100-meters and the outdoor 100- and 200-meters.

He also performed extremely well at the IC4As, winning three of the four races he competed in. He won his second consecutive indoor 200-meter title but could not hold off Notre Dame's Raghib Ismail in the 55-meter dash. This has turned out to be the only IC4A race where Jett has not finished first. Jett closed out the season by winning the outdoor 100- and 200-meter dashes.

The physical education major has picked up right where he left off this season, winning his fifth All-America award by finishing third in the 200-meter dash at Indianapolis' Hoosier Dome.

Jett, who is a member of the Athletic Director's Academic Honor Roll, was spectacular at the IC4A Indoor Championships as well, as he earned first-place finishes in both the 55- and 200-meter dashes. Besides winning his third consecutive IC4A 200-meter title, his time of 21.41 set a Jadwin Gym record.

Yet with all his success at big meets, Jett takes it all in stride.

"The big thing for me is not winning all these races, it's the fact that I have been constantly improving my times," Jett says. "Don't get me wrong, I'm proud of all the races that I've won, especially all my IC4A races. It is just more important for me to improve on my past performances. I'd really like for everything to gel this summer when I compete in the U.S. Olympic Trials. That is my ultimate goal - to represent my country in the Olympics."

"With this being an Olympic year, James is getting a lot of recognition in the track world," Pushkin says. "He is a great guy, who is very easy to coach. He has proven over the years that he can compete with world-class runners. It will be a sad day when James Jett graduates next year."

It is unlikely that Jett's competitors at the IC4As the last few years will share in that sadness.

University Profile-

Northeastern University

Welcome to the IC4A Championships and New England's outdoor athletic theatre, the Bernard and Jolane Solomon Track located on the grounds of one of Northeastern University's many satellite campuses here in Dedham.

As you pan the horizon, you'll notice that more than half of the oval here is embraced by woods, while the open, spectator side is guarded by a natural knoll for spectators and by Barletta Hall, the Northeastern classroom building behind you that once served young Catholic Seminarians in the midst of devotions.

The Solomon Track, for its part, is dedicated to the University's practice and meet competitions, as well as to many other local colleges and high school's competitive schedules. As a facility, the eight lane track has already hosted three championship events at the collegiate level, including the North Atlantic Conference, Greater Boston, and New England Championships.

Running events and the javelin, long jump, triple jump, and high jumps and contested on and within the oval, while the field events take place on the plateau to your left. The cage guarantees that errant shots, hammers and discuses stay put, so to speak.

Today, considering that greatest of New England provisos—weather permitting—several New England records are due to shatter in the Solomon Theatre. In any event, the University trusts that you enjoy the drama of the East's most prestigious track and field event.

Your host for the IC4As has been around long enough to be older, or at least claim to be older, than any spectator here this weekend. Since 1898 Northeastern has been a landmark of the Fenway area of Boston, and a neighbor to Symphony Hall, the Museum of Fine Arts, and Fenway Park, home of the Boston Red Sox.

One of every five Massachusetts students chooses Northeastern for a college education, and most matriculating undergraduates take advantage of the world's most extensive and successful Cooperative Education program in which students alternate periods of study with employment in sectors related to their majors.

The University's concentration on a "doing" student involves the individual's academic achievement, career development, and social and intellectual growth within the Cooperative framework. Although Northeastern is one of the largest private institutions in the country, 70 percent of its undergraduate programs admits fewer than 30 students.

Undergraduate fields of study include arts and sciences, business administration, computer science, criminal justice, engineering, human development professions, nursing, and pharmacy and allied health professions. A Juris Doctor degree and Masters in Business Administration are among the degrees awarded in the expansive graduate offering.

Academics at Northeastern contribute to and borrow from one of the most eclectic cultural centers in the world. Boston, also known as "The Hub," is a walkable city known for its diverse student population, theater, arts, and sports. Northeastern students enjoy both campus and city social options accessible by foot and Mass Transit.

Athletics plays an integral part in the University's social fabric. Northeastern fields 22 varsity teams, and offers an alluring intramural menu for all of its students. A member of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, the Eastern College Athletic Conference, the North Atlantic Conference, the Hockey East Association, and the football-playing Yankee Conference, Husky men's and women's athletics have been staples in regional and national tournament competition.

Committed to its sports teams, the University recently completed a 1.2 million renovation to the Cabot Cage, the facility for indoor track, tennis, women's basketball, and women's gymnastics. The 1989 construction of the Henderson Boathouse also gave a home on the Charles River to the men's and women's crews.
