Our American oak comes from the lush white oak forests across the upper and central Midwest, the Northeast and the Mid-Atlantic.

We enjoy long-standing relationships with family-operated mills who have been in the oak business for several generations. The Appalachian region with its expansive oak forests and magnificent stands of white oak produce some of the best stave wood in the country. The Minnesota forests lie along the same latitude as some of France's best oak forests and offer similarly elegant flavor profiles. Missouri quality white oak has been a mainstay of American barrel production for generations.

EXPORT SELECTIONS

The wood for our two-year selection American oak barrels is chosen primarily from one of the best sources of white oak in the country: the Ozark Highlands of Missouri. This barrel is designed to offer all the classic attributes of premium American oak: aromas of vanilla, coconut and brown spices; volume and richness on the palate; and a long, sweet finish.

PRESTIGE SELECTIONS

Our Appalachian and Northern Blend barrels represent two very distinct styles of American oak. The Appalachian Blend selection contributes creamy, milk chocolate sweetness to red wines and sweet vanilla and coconut to white wines. The Northern Blend selection offers subtle spices and elegant toasty notes in a style that bridges the gap between French and American oak.

SINGLE MILL SELECTIONS

Our Single Mill Selections, much like single vineyard wines, are made to highlight the distinctive qualities of the American mills we partner with each year. Our Minnesota mill produces the finest grain American oak staves from the northern limit of the white oak habitat. This wood is known for its remarkable subtlety and elegance. The wood from our Missouri mill is renowned for its robust American oak character. Lastly, our Virginia mill is an artisanal operation that sources the finest white oak logs available from the Virginia Piedmont and Mid-Atlantic regions. Virginia oak is prized for its refined aromatic profile and delicate sweetness.
