President's Message

Well, if you didn't get along with your spring cleaning aggressively, it's too late now!

I did get more than a few orchids repotted but it seems I can always find more. Some plants show a bit poorly possibly due to deterioration of the media that can result in deterioration of plant roots. Some plants have a strong tendency to grow beyond the edges of their pot and may need to be repotted back into a pot. On the other hand, some orchids can grow quite well with their roots hanging outside the pot.

One benefit that can be taken from repotting is the possibility of dividing a plant. Many orchids can grow more growing leads that can be used to then create more individual plants. That can then lead to having divisions to bring to orchid meetings to share with other growers. Having several divisions in your collection is advisable as sometimes an orchid just insists on not growing well. On the other hand, getting rid of unwanted extra orchids makes room for new plants. Maybe even some from fellow orchid growers.

I plan to bring a few divisions to the next meeting. I am also expecting that Terry might also be bringing divisions from Stan Brown.

See you at the meeting.
