

Signs of a Disengaged Employee

Change of Attitude

The individual seems to think and feel differently about the company. Perhaps they speak out less & take less notice of information/instructions

Lack of Visibility

In comparison to previously, the individual seems to keep to themselves. There has been less interaction with managers and the wider team

Reduction of Input

This person used to participate in relevant discussions that impacted their job. Now, they seem to give little consideration to decisions that impact them.

Little Attention to Detail

Discrepancies in their output and substandard work performance. Emails being missed with no justification or reason

Absences

You may start to notice periods of absence & little consideration on the impact this has on the business & teams

