Anita Sewell Abstract Artist

Anita enjoyed her childhood growing up in Detroit where she learned she could be whoever she wanted to be.

Starting out, some 15 years ago, Anita mostly used acrylic paint. However, she has begun experimenting with oil-based paint, which takes her back to her childhood. Her motto when developing her pieces is, "Be a kid first, then be an adult." This motto shapes her technique when creating art. Another medium that transports her back to childhood is charcoal. When charcoal colors her hands, she lets her hands lead her, and a beautiful piece of art emerges.

Mitchell Gross Painter

"I graduated from Western Michigan University with an emphasis in painting I've been painting for the last seven years. I paint to experience and feel. Put Simply respiration, I paint, because as a black man and as a person of color we do not have the right of hostility, and in my work. I'm allowed to feel the true undulations of the human experience. My name is Mitchell GROSS. To be able to truly ingest and regurgitate is my only objective."
