

Unsolicited Material Disclosure

Legacy Studio

A Division of Legacy Publications Agency LLC

At Legacy Studio, we are deeply committed to protecting the rights and creative efforts of writers, artists, and storytellers. We recognize the immense value of original ideas and understand how much trust it takes to share your vision with a production company. In that spirit, we've established the following policy—not to discourage creators—but to protect both your intellectual property and the creative integrity of Legacy Studio and its development teams.

Why This Policy Exists

Creative professionals often find themselves working on similar themes, historical periods, or story arcs. Without clear boundaries, misunderstandings can arise when a submitted idea overlaps with a project already in development. Our policy is designed to ensure fair treatment for all artists while maintaining a secure and respectful environment for the internal creative process.

What This Means for You

- We cannot accept or review any unsolicited scripts, treatments, pitches, concepts, manuscripts, artwork, or other creative submissions.
- If unsolicited materials are submitted, they will not be read, reviewed, or retained and may be deleted or discarded without response.

Artist Protection

This policy exists first and foremost to protect your work. By refraining from submitting materials informally, you retain full control of your ideas and ensure that your projects are only shared through formal and protected channels—such as through a licensed literary agent, entertainment attorney, or recognized representative.

Our Commitment

Legacy Studio is committed to developing original content with integrity and professionalism. We support creators and welcome collaborations that are transparent, respectful, and aligned with industry best practices. When we do engage with outside material, it is always done through proper agreements and clear submission channels to ensure mutual protection.

Formal Submissions

If you believe your project may be a fit for Legacy Studio, we encourage you to connect with us through representation. Submissions made via agents, managers, or attorneys will be reviewed in accordance with our internal development process.

Thank you for understanding.

We look forward to collaborating with writers, filmmakers, and creators in a way that honors your vision and protects all parties involved.

Legacy Studio – Where History Meets Innovation.