Steel features Çelik ürünlerin Özellikleri

Steel Features

It should bear the 18/10 Cr/Ni label. According to the weight of the pot, 18% of the pot is made of chrome, 10% of nickel and 72% of steel. While chromium gives shine to the product, nickel prevents rusting and tarnishing. The 18/10 label is also referred to as 304 quality stainless steel. The bottom of the pot should be thick. Three types of steel are used. First quality is 304, second quality is 430, third quality is 201.

Steel has a body thickness of 1mm and a base thickness of 7mm. A pot with a thick bottom is heavy. At the same time, because it stores heat, it cools down slower and the food inside stays hot longer. When using products with a thick bottom in steel pressure cookers, you can turn off the stove earlier than the cooking time of the food. Since the bottom is thick, it preserves the heat and continues to cook even if the bottom of the stove is closed with pressure. However, there is a point that we should pay attention to here, aluminum material is used in the lower layers of steel pots to distribute the heat evenly. In order not to reach the aluminum layer, the inside of the steel pot should not be cleaned by rubbing with a wire, the adhered dirt should be cleaned after softening with hot water. Of course, it is not easy to reach the aluminum layer by cleaning with a wire a few times, but by doing this for a long time, there may be abrasions and we can gradually reach the aluminum layer without realizing it.

The pots have stainless steel and bagalit handles. It is an important detail that the handles are firmly mounted on the body of the pot, that they are comfortable to hold and do not get hot while cooking. Stainless steel handles are both dishwasher and oven safe. In case of sudden careless contact with fire, the handles do not burn and do not deform. Since they are soldered, the handles do not loosen and provide long-term use. However, pots with bagalit handles are not suitable for the oven due to high temperatures. These are dishwasher safe but may fade over time. As a result, you should only put pots with bagalit handles in the dishwasher occasionally, not constantly. In case of fire contact, the bagalit will melt and deform. At the same time, since the bagalit handles are attached to the body with screws, they will loosen after a while and the handles will shake. As long as the pot is placed on the correct hotplate according to the width of the bottom, the fire will not touch the steel handles and the handles will not get hot.

The lids of Steel pots are made of 7 mm thick glass or steel. The other feature is the lids of the pot. While the lid fits the pot perfectly and is concave, that is, the fully-fitting lid of our pots preserves the heat; The concave lid allows the rising steam to fall back into the pot, and food can be cooked with little water. Steel reveals its difference in this detail, as the dishes cooked in its own juice will always be more delicious. Every stage of the products has been carefully prepared to make your work easier in the kitchen.
