

Creating the next generation of Black female tech leaders

Welcome

Avis Yates Rivers , Founder

"I created The TCGi Foundation so that my daughters and their daughters could be introduced to a world of limitless innovation and potential. Tech has been the means through which I've been able to touch so many and I wanted to empower young girls to think that anything is possible. It is critical that they are inspired to see their success and be their success."

SUPPORT OUR WOMEN

We need partners like you to help us create the next generation of technology leaders.

Our mission is to endow talented Black women through scholarships, internships, and access to employment opportunities.

The TCGi Foundation mentorship program, launched in 2023 in alliance with NCWIT, pairs women with seasoned tech professionals to provide guidance and insight on the ever-evolving tech world. This is complemented by other support programs such as job shadowing, internships, webinars and employment opportunities.

This journey is not finite, as we pledge to remain with these women throughout their education and careers as their champions, sponsors, advocates, allies and supporters.

With your support we can encourage these young women to pursue their dreams and provide them with the resources to make them a reality.

"(With this scholarship) I will be able to focus solely on continuing to excel in my studies, thus being a role model for young girls who look like me."

-Myaya Morton, 2022 recipient of The John Fitzpatrick Scholarship

The TCGi Foundation has already made tremendous impact, awarding twelve outstanding young Black women with $110,000 in scholarships to study any tech-related discipline at their institution of choice. Beyond graduation, we will continue to support them by helping to broaden their network, and connecting them to senior tech professionals and mentors before and after securing a job.

Who We Are

Launched in 2020, the Technology Concepts Group International Foundation's (www.tcgifoundation.com) mission is to address the diversity gap in tech by breaking down barriers for young Black women studying and entering the field and shifting the mindset of what is possible. As a 501 (c)(3) organization, the TCGi Foundation provides scholarships to support educational goals for high school seniors and college students studying technology, as well as mentoring, up-skilling, coaching and advocacy to ensure that these deserving young women gain equal and equitable access to employment opportunities.
