

Right to Life

Life is an important adventure to live from conception to natural death. You and I are alive and we have rights but, what about the rights of the unborn? Do they have the right to live and have adventures of their own? Is the importance of the lives of the unborn determined by if they are born or unborn?

An abortoin is a killing of an innocent life. God calls us to follow the commandments. One of the commandments is you shall not kill. An abortoin is the murdering of an innocent life and is also unable to defend itself. We often see T.V. commercials that talk about saving animals and adopting pets. Why should we be worried about feral dogs when millions of the unborn humans are being killed? While supporting an animal charity might be a worthwhile cause, animals definitely have a different position in God's economy.

God created humans in his image and likeness and gave us a soul to be preserved for eternal life. This makes us unique among all of the creatures in God's creation. Having a soul makes humans superior to animals. Killing a cow for example does not end the life of a being made in the likeness of God. While killing the cow for example, is no sin, ending the life of a human is murder.

The Constitution of the United States of America in the fifth amendment states : "...nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property.." I would say that being dismembered was being deprived of life , But Roe V Wade effectively made abortion leagal and denied the unborn of their constitutional rights. Having an adventure should be fun, but not at the expense of someone's life.

In conclusion, the rights and liberties of the unborn have been violated. God tells us not to kill, yet we kill the most helpless and unable of our human kind.
