

Janise Ingram was born in Kansas City but has lived in Arizona since the age of 5. She spent 30 years working in the legal field in Tucson and studied photography and art in her spare time. In 2018, she and her husband Sam moved to their Pumpkin Patch Ranch on a quiet rural road in Mescal, close to Rincon Peak.

A year later, Janise discovered No Fear Painting Workshop in Benson and began painting in acrylics. She is known for her bright color palettes, mostly in landscapes drawn from her life and travels in the Southwest. She enjoys incorporating architectural and historic elements into her landscapes, while still showing the beauty of nature.

Her work has been displayed and sold at Endeavor Gallery in Benson, as well as other art exhibitions in Scottsdale and southeastern Arizona, where she has won several awards. She paints commissions several times a year, and her work has traveled all across the country.
