Life in the 1500's

Discover how some of today's sayings and customs originated.

Most of the houses had a thatch roof. Thatch meant thick straw, piled high with no wood underneath. Little animals,(cats, dogs, mice, rats, bugs) lived in the roof. When it rained, the thatch would become wet and slippery so at times the animals would slip and slid off the roof....thus the saying; "It's raining cats and dogs." Most houses had dirt floors. Only the wealthy had flooring other than dirt.....thus the saying; "dirt poor".

President's Comments

I want to take this opportunity to thank all the AGHS staff for their good work in the past year.

VP Durvin LaFleur did a great job leading the presentation at the Kinder Garden Club meeting. He, Fran Clemmons and Quida Savant represented our society very well.

With the generous aid of the Allen Parish Assessor's office, Durvin has also handled the copy work of some old plats of Allen Parish that would have been lost forever. We really appreciate the assistance of the Assessor's office.

Despite two hip surgeries, Fran has stayed on top of her work as AGHS secretary and treasure. She is a dedicated officer and member.

Quida Savant, our reporter, not only tends to the reporting, she is always ready and willing to do whatever she can to help in any way. She too is dedicated to the society

Ethel Sacker, assistant editor, is no longer able to attend the meetings but is always ready and willing to so what she can from home.

We have a great team and look forward to adding new members this year.

Wishing everyone a great New Year,

Betty Sarver

Allen Genealogical and Historical Society President

A POINT TO PONDER

Kind hearts are the gardens, Kind thoughts are the roots, Kind words are the flowers, Kind deeds are the fruits.

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow

I ask everyone to please except my apologies for this first 2012 issue of CROSSROADS being so late. I had my left hip surgery in December and was doing very well doing my therapy, and recovering great, until I was hit full force with attacks on my body from that old man misery—Rheumatoid Arthritis, so I put everything on hold until now. I am doing a lot better and I pray I will continue to feel well. Thank you all for your patience.

February 7,2012 was the first meeting of THE ALLEN GENEALOGICAL and HISTORICAL SOCIETY. Guest speaker for the meeting was Adagria Haddock, director of the Allen Parish Tourist Commission. Miss Haddock has asked the AGHS to help in gathering word of mouth stories of family histories from our area. Hopefully with the stories we provide to her, she will be able to submit everything to the highway department to establish the title of the highway from DeRidder, La., throu Oberlin, La., then on into Kinder, La., as the Myths & Legends Byway. If you have any story you would care to relate, please call the library, and give your name and telephone number, so they in turn may get in touch with a member of the AGHS to call you back.

The next meeting of THE ALLEN GENEALOGICAL and HISTORICAL SOCIETY will be on APRIL 3RD, 2012. Everyone will meet at the Kinder, La., library at 10:00 A.M., then will leave for the ALLEN PARISH LEATHERWOOD MUSEUM in Oakdale, La.. Please invite family members and friends to come with you.

Proving (Or Disproving) Family Tales

By Juliana Smith 13 November 2011

Although my front lawn is still sporting a fake cemetery (which my daughter promises she'll pack up this weekend), we've officially moved on to Thanksgiving planning. Emails are circulating with menu items and I'm looking forward to relaxing with family, and of course talking a little family history. It seems like the stories really seem to flow during the holiday season—some true, some perhaps with a trace of truth.

Stories that stray from the truth may be due to "embellishments" that have been added over the years for entertainment, to prop up the family status, or perhaps to gloss over an indiscretion. And sometimes, they're just due to fading memories. Whatever the reason, it falls on us to use our skills as family historians to uncover the real story behind the family tales.

Details, Details...

When a family story surfaces, gather all the details you can. The more details you have, the better chance you have of proving or disproving a story. Ask questions and if possible, try to get information from several independent sources. Aunt Lilly and Aunt Mae may remember different aspects of the event and the details they recall can provide clues as to what parts of the story may be true and inconsistencies can be more closely examined.

Does It Make Sense?

Ask yourself if the story makes sense in the context of time. There was a legend in our family that the father of one of our ancestors came over with Lafayette. Since that particular ancestor was born in 1837, if his father had come over at the time of the American Revolution, he would have been a bit old to have fathered my ancestor. So it's highly unlikely that that is the case.

When you're weighing whether a story is true, creating a chronology of events that includes historical events and everything you know about your ancestor can help you gain a little perspective.

What's Provable?

Look for details that can be proven through records. With our Lafayette story, there was one other possibility. The Marquis de Lafayette returned to the United States in 1824. If our ancestor was with him on that trip, the story is a little more plausible, but we can see from his passenger arrival record that he wasn't among those in the General's party.

Was he on the crew? It's likely that we'll never know, and since that story is one that is common among family myths, I'm not going to spend time chasing that particular tale. Instead I'll conduct research on that ancestor just as I would anyone else and see where the trail leads without any pre-conceived notions.

Most stories aren't as grandiose, but still may have resulted in records being created. Was the story newsworthy? Say Uncle Jerome was hit by an ice truck. That could well have been in the local newspaper. How old was he when it happened? Estimating the date will make a newspaper search easier.

With accidents there is also the possibility of a lawsuit, which would have created court records, and possibly other newspaper pieces. Did he die of his injury? In addition to the cause of death listed on his death certificate, there may have been a coroner's inquest.

Good Story, Wrong Guy

When dates are inconsistent, perhaps your family story is also referring to the wrong generation, or even the wrong line of the family. Another of our family stories was that one of my ancestors, Thomas Tobin, who was a hatter, made a hat for Abraham Lincoln. I later learned that Thomas' brothers were also hatters and one of them was enumerated in the 1870 census living in Washington, D.C. Was he there during the Civil War and did Aunt Olive confuse the two brothers in her story? I'll probably never know for sure, but I can do some research in city directories and see whether George was in D.C. during the time Abraham Lincoln was alive.

Honing Your Investigative Skills

Family stories are a great way to sharpen your investigative skills. Not only will the real family stories add depth and interest to your family history, but you'll also be able to use those skills when records don't agree or when you're trying to sort your ancestors from others. And of course, who doesn't love a good story?

With the assistance of our VP Durvin LaFleur, I have been helping a gentleman in North Carolina research some of his family that lived in the Kinder area in the late 1800's and early 1900's. Durvin was able to locate photos of one member and I found a homestead document and a property purchase document from the U. S. General Land office for their home. We have found other pertinent information for which he asked. It has been nice to make his acquaintance and he looks forward to coming here to visit some day.

It all started with a phone call from this gentleman to the library where he was referred to us. We have kept in touch with Email which makes it possible for us to send him copies of the photos and documents we find.

This is part of our society's work; helping people find their roots, connect with their family's past and learn about our area of Louisiana.

There were families that moved to Imperial Calcasieu in that time period that no longer have relatives living here. It is nice to be able to bring them to the forefront, so to speak, and make their memories come to life again.

We are certainly glad to have Durvin as our VP. He loves this area and the history that goes with it. Plus, he has a keen memory of things he has heard and read which makes him a wealth of information.

The Lanier Family

The majority of the following history is taken from the book "Lanier" by Louise Ingersoll. This book can be found in the Family History Library in Salt Lake City, Utah, numbered 929.273 L272i. The microfilm of this book can also be found in the Family History Library, film #0982362.

This Coat of Arms is of the Crusading origin. The cross of squares is called an "honorable ordinary" and is one of the symbols of nobility. The cross is also a Crusading emblem, each square denoting a year spent upon the Crusades by the ancestor. The bordure is another honorable ordinary and an additional mark of nobility. The falcon is a heraldic pun, called a "cantling" and is a play upon the name. The lion, the symbol of bravery, is taken from the family residence. It is the Lion of Gascony. In the arms, blue is the color of truth, silver of loyalty, and gold of strength and purity.

The name of Lanier is derived from the ancient French tongue and means a "Falcon". So far as written records show, the family is of French descent, and is from the province of Gascony in southern France; however, older records show a Tuscany family in northern Italy of the same name, and several genealogists claim that the family moved from Tuscany to Gascony after the Crusades.

The records of the Huguenot Society of London show a John Lanye living in County Surry in 1547; a record of 1 July 1544 gives a John Lanye, laborer, born Normandy, age 50 years, in England 30 years, married an English woman, six children; and a Nicholas Laneares in London in 1550, a denizen.

John Lanyer, a musician, arrived in London in 1561 with his wife Joan, and two children; and Nicholas Lanier arrived from Paris in 1561. Both were musicians to the Queen.

The Laniers were Protestants who left France to escape the early persecutions. Protestantism began in 1555, and the height of the persecutions was reached in the massacre of St. Bartholomew on the eve of August 24, 1572. It was in 1560 that the conspiracy began. One party hoped to enrich themselves by the estates of the heretics who were executed, or banished. The other party hoped to gain the favor of the masses by punishing the Protestants.

The estates of those who fled were sold, their children who remained behind were exposed to the greatest sufferings. France lost thousands of useful and rich inhabitants whose industry, wealth, and skills found a welcome reception in foreign countries. To prevent the emigration of the Protestants, the frontiers were guarded with the utmost vigilance; yet more than 500,000 fled to England, Holland, Switzerland, and Germany.

There were two Laniers who fled France at the same time, in 1561, both settling in the Parish of St. Olave in London. They are John and Nicholas. It is possible they were brothers or cousins. The Laniers were Huguenots to London, and are well recorded in the books of the Huguenot Society of London, but could not be called Huguenots to America, having been naturalized Englishmen for three generations. However, their descendants are eligible to join the Huguenot Society.

JOHN LANYER, who died November 29, 1577, was referred to in 1577 as a Frenchman, and a musician, a native of Rouen, France, and an owner of property in Crutched Friars in the Parish of St. Olave, Hart Street, London.

On the 18th day of January 1576/77, administration of the goods of John Lanier, late of the Parish of St. Olave, Hart Street, city of London, deceased, was granted to Barbara Laniere, alias Nivelet, wife of Cardinus Nyvelet, his natural and lawful daughter, in person of her said husband. A marginal note said that "John Laniere had not any goods belonging to him in the hands of the Administratix." The following item will explain the above: "This house, 1575, Sept. 4 burst out in a terrible fire and was consumed to the stone walls."

His widow, Jane Laniere, married (2) James Marcadye. There was an Inquisition dated April 18, 1577, concerning his property, in which she was named with two Lanier daughters, Mary, and Celia Brun. Two other Lanier daughters and a son were born after their arrival in London, and all died as infants; their burials are recorded in St. Olaves Parish Register.

Court of King Henry II of France, and also the Court of Queen Elizabeth, and King James of England, was the founder of the Lanier family of musicians, and the ancestor of the American Laniers including those in Allen Parish, Louisiana.

Nicholas Lanier was born 1544 in Rouen, France, and died January 31, 1610/11 in County Kent, England. He married (1) Unknown. He married (2) Lucreece Bassano February 13, 1570/71 in All Hallows Barking, daughter of Anthony Bassano and Elena De Nazzi. She was born September 24, 1556, and died Abt. January 4, 1633/34. He was said to be sober and honest. He served in the court of the late French king, Henry II, having been engaged to serve as messenger, and as a replacement for one Peter Guillaume, one of the Queen of France's flute players, lately dead. Confirmation of his services under King Henry II is to be found in the lists of "Chantres et autres Jouers d'instruments" of the French King's Chambers, which include Nicholas Laniere for the years of 1559 and 1560.

During the Protestant persecutions, he was a Huguenot to England with safe passage arranged for him by his patroness, the widowed Queen Catherine de Medici.

In 1561, the Earl of Hertford was visiting in Paris, and there met young Nicholas Laniere. He was recommended as a good flute, and also cornet, player. Nicholas came to England that year, settling in the Parish of St. Olave in London.

Nicholas married Lucreece Bassano in London on February 13, 1571. Some say the marriage was arranged by the Queen. Lucreece was christened in London on September 24, 1556, the daughter of Anthony and Elena (DeNazzi) Bassano, who were originally from Bassano del Grappa, Veneto, Italy. Perhaps Anthony Bassano was one of the Italian musicians in the Royal Orchestra. Nicholas and Lucreece had 10 children.

Nicholas Lanier moved to East Greenwich, County Kent, where he was one of the musicians to the Court until his death in 1612. He was a very wealthy man, having extensive holdings in Blackheath, and the surrounding country. This section was south of the Thames, and about five miles east of the London Bridge. One of the many palaces was here, the Royal Hospital, and many other buildings of early importance. In early 1700, an old house was taken down. It was described as being fitted up for a theater, probably by the Laniers who were musicians and dramatists.

Nicholas Lanier, who was in the Court of King Henry II of France, and also the Court of Queen Elizabeth, and King James of England, was the founder of the Lanier family of musicians, and the ancestor of the American Laniers. Their six sons all were musicians to the Queen and Kings; three of their four daughters married musicians. And of their grandchildren, at least eight of them became members of the Royal Orchestra, making three generations serving the Royal family musically. In 1604 Nicholas Lanier Sr. was named "Musician of the Flutes", and after his death about 1612, his son Andrea succeeded him "for life".

The will of Nicholas Lanier, Gent., was dated 28 January 1611/12, and was proved July 1612. It reads "To Lucreece my wife, all my lands, and goods; to sons John, Alphonse, Innocent, Jerome, Clement, 12 shillings; to Andrea 20 pounds if he does not have my place; my four daughters, three of whom are unmarried, I leave to the discretion of my wife Lucreece, my sole executrix."

Lucreece died, and was buried in East Greenwich on January 4, 1633/4.

Clement Lanier was born c1590/1592 in England, and named as a court musician in 1604. He is listed as "Gentleman of the King's Chamber" to both James I, (this is the same King James that ordered the Bible translated to King James English) and Charles I. He is known as a musician and master of the reorder (musical instrument similar to a clarinet).

Clementment Lanier either died or was buried November 6, 1661 in East Greenwich, England. The will was proved December 3, 1661 and registered May 20, 1662.

After the dethroning (and decapitation) of King Charles I, many of Nicholas the Younger's paintings were dispersed. Clement and his brother Jerome were able to purchase some of these back for the family. However, the family lost most of their wealth during the civil war (1642 - 1649) while Oliver Cromwell was in power as Lord Protector. When Charles, Prince of Wales (later Charles II) came to the throne, the Lanier family regained much of their stature and fortune but many migrated to the United States and Canada.

The following article by Harold Winfrey (Captain Caller, July-September, 1998) was first printed in the "Reminiscent Writing Contest" 1997 for the Calcasieu Parish Public Library. Harold won Honorable Mention for this very informative article. We, the AGHS, felt it should be published in CROSSROADS to inform Allen Parish residents of this important part of our parish history.

BLACK FAMILIES OF HICKORY FLAT--A SHORT HISTORY

By Harold Winfrey

The area of land between the towns of Oberlin and Kinder, Louisiana, because of the many hickory nut trees and its low flat topography, was known for a long time as Hickory Flat. It is still known by that name even today by some

During the 1700s and early 1800s this land was inhabited by Indians, the Coushattas. Descendants of these Indians are still in the Elton area. Elton is about ten miles east of Kinder.

The first settlers in the flats were the white Cole families. They came from South Carolina during the 1840s. They were farmer and woodcutters, and the land was available and fertile. These families settled mostly on the western edge of the flats around what are now the little communities of LeBlanc and Reeves. Along with the Coles, the Reeves came in and built many sawmills along the Calcasieu River.

Like a lot of the families of that day, the Coles and Reeves had slaves. One of the slaves that came in with the Coles was a man named Franklin. He was born in 1836 in South Carolina. His mother, Malinda (born in 1818), was also in this group. After he gained his freedom, Franklin kept the name of his former owners, and moved east into Hickory Flat along with his wife Elizabeth (Rideaux).

In 1856 Jacob Harmon was born. He was the son of a white overseer and a slave woman on the farm of Charlotte Cole, a widow. The Harmons that now live in the area between Oberlin and Kinder are his descendants.

In the late 1860s Andrew Botley came in from St. Landry Parish to find work in the lumber mills. He came with his wife Ellen and their five children. Five more children were born in Hickory Flat.

During the time after the Civil War, other black families began moving in from St. Landry Parish. Jefferson Morehead and some members of the Morrow family moved in the Elton area. Jefferson's wife, Nancy, was a Morrow. Nancy's brother, Lawrence, came also. He married one of Andrew Botley's daughters, Carolina. They had seven children. All of the black Morrows in the area descended from this couple.

Early in 1869, a lone rider came into Hickory Flat from the little community of Grand Prairie, over in St. Landry Parish. He was sent by his older brother to map out a way to Oklahoma. He was John Captain, Jr., a single man and an adventurer. Old stories tell that he carried a long bullwhip, and was an expert with it. What caused him to stop in Hickory Flat and to decide that it would be a suitable place to settle, I can only speculate. It may have been the good available farm land, coupled with the short distance the families would have to travel.

During the 1850s Hickory Flat was a part of northern Imperial Calcasieu Parish. The parish seat was in what is now Lake Charles. When the Captain men came to acquire land and build homes, they had to go to Lake Charles to record the deed. It is possible that this was where men like George Singleton and Steve Aleck heard about Hickory Flat and decided to more there from the Lake Charles area.

The Captain family, led by Julian Captain [ca1844-1914], wanted their children to have a good basic education. This could not be had for families of freed slaves in St. Landry Parish during the early years after emancipation. Late in 1869 or early in 1870, the Captains left Grand Prairie and moved into Hickory Flat. This group consisted of Julian, his wife, Modeste Jacques [ca1844-1921], their daughter Emma [ca1867-?] (Modeste was pregnant with their second child, Mary Louise [ca1870-?], at the time), three of Julian's brothers, John [ca1849-1914], Eli [ca1851-?] and August [ca1854-?], and three of his sisters, Sarah [ca1856-?], Clarise, [ca 1863-?] and Alice [ca1857-?] (Alice was a half sister). They had the same father but a different mother. Their father, John, Sr.[1817-?] also came with them. Their mother Marie Ann Julian [1810-?], did not accompany them. In the 1870 Census, Mary Ann Captain was listed in St. Landry Parish living with her brother, Marcellius and his wife, Pauline.

Being a devout Christian and one who wanted his children to have an education, Julian wasted little time in getting a church/school house built. He set aside two acres of his own land for the building. The building was built across the road from where the St. Paul Church now stands. He sent for and got a school teacher from Oklahoma. The teacher, Lawrence Shaw, taught both school and the Bible.

The little community continued growing well into the 1900s, and even today, descendants of the Captains, Botleys, Moreheads, and Coles can still be found in Hickory Flat.©
