years. He is best known for his work as part of Tony Orlando and Dawn.

In 1993, he opened the Tony Orlando Yellow Ribbon Music Theatre in Branson, Missouri. He ended his act there in 2013 and has since continued to perform many live shows as a headliner, mostly in Las Vegas, Nevada.

Early life and career- Michael Anthony Orlando Cassavitis was born on April 3, 1944, the son of a Greek father and a Puerto Rican mother. He spent his earliest years in Hell's Kitchen, Manhattan, New York City. In his teenage years, the family moved to Union City, New Jersey, and later Hasbrouck Heights, New Jersey.

Orlando's musical career started with The Five Gents, a doo-wop group he formed in 1959 at age 15, with whom he recorded demo tapes. He got the attention of music publisher and producer Don Kirshner, who hired him to write songs in an office across from New York's Brill Building, along with Carole King, Neil Sedaka, Toni Wine, Barry Mann, Bobby Darin, Connie Francis, and Tom and Jerry, who didn't make it in the office until they changed their name to Simon and Garfunkel.

Kirshner also hired Orlando to record songwriter demos as a solo artist, and his first success came at the age of 16 when he charted in the US and UK with the hits "Bless You" and "Halfway To Paradise". He also appeared at the Brooklyn Paramount Theater with DJ Murray the K. Orlando also had four records that "Bubbled Under" the Hot 100: "Chills" in 1962, "Shirley" and "I'll Be There" in 1963, and "I Was A Boy (When You Needed A Man)" as by Billy Shields in April 1969. Gerry Goffin and Jack Keller wrote a doo-wop version of Stephen Foster's song "Beautiful Dreamer" for Orlando. Released as a single in 1962, the song was picked up by the Beatles who included it in their set lists on the Beatles Winter 1963 Helen Shapiro Tour; a recorded version was released on their 2013 album On Air – Live at the BBC Volume 2. New Colony Six recorded an Orlando composition, "I'm Just Waitin' (Anticipatin' For Her To Show Up)", which charted locally in Chicago and "Bubbled Under" the Hot 100 in July 1967.

Orlando continued as a solo artist and also became a producer himself, as well as a successful music executive in the late 1960s. In 1967, Clive Davis hired Orlando as general manager of Columbia Records publishing subsidiary April-Blackwood Music. By the late 1960s, Orlando had worked his way up to vice president of a larger publishing company, CBS Music where he signed, co-wrote with and produced Barry Manilow (under the name "Featherbed"). . He also worked with other artists, such as The Yardbirds, James Taylor, Grateful Dead, Blood Sweat and Tears, and Laura Nyro. In the summer of 1969, he recorded with the studio group Wind and had a #28 hit that year with "Make Believe" on producer Bo Gentry's Life Records. Orlando was experiencing success, primarily as a music executive, and Davis pretended not to notice when Orlando accepted a $3,000 advance and sang lead vocals on a song called "Candida" as a favor for two producer friends. If the record failed, Orlando didn't want it to affect his reputation, so he used a pseudonym: Dawn.

When the song became an international number-one song, he began to use his name in the group becoming "Dawn featuring Tony Orlando" and then "Tony Orlando and Dawn". The group had 19 other top 40 tracks, including "Tie a Yellow Ribbon Round the Ole Oak Tree", the top-selling hit of 1973 and one of the biggest selling singles of all time. The group also had a hit variety program,

The Tony Orlando and Dawn Show on CBS from 1974 to 1976. They then broke up in 1977, after which he has performed as Tony Orlando.

Orlando recorded the record

"Candida", with backup singers including Toni Wine (who wrote the song) and Linda November. Concerned about a possible conflict of interest with his April-Blackwood duties, Orlando sang under the condition that his name not be associated with the project, so it was released under the simple name of "Dawn", the middle name of the daughter of Bell records executive Steve Wax.

"Candida" became a worldwide hit in 1970, reaching number one in five countries, and the top ten in many others, including number three in the United States. Dawn, with Wine and November again singing backup, recorded another song, "Knock Three Times", which itself became a #1 hit. Orlando then wanted to go on tour, and asked two other session singers, Telma Hopkins and Joyce Vincent Wilson to join for the tour. Orlando then discovered that there were six touring groups using that name, so Dawn became "Dawn featuring Tony Orlando", which changed to Tony Orlando and Dawn in 1973.

The new group recorded more hits, including "Tie a Yellow Ribbon Round the Ole Oak Tree" (1973) and "He Don't Love You (Like I Love You)" (1975), a cover of the Jerry Butler hit, "He Will Break Your Heart". With a successful recording career, Orlando then set his sights on television. As described in The San Francisco Chronicle, "Tony Orlando and Dawn burst out of television sets during the Ford administration, a sunny antidote to the dark cynicism that followed Watergate. He represented simple, traditional values, a conservative return to pure entertainment. He drew a happy face in the "O" of his autograph. It was not terribly cool, but America loved him." The Tony Orlando and Dawn Show on CBS became a hit, a summer replacement for the Sonny & Cher show, and ran for four seasons from 1974 to 1976. It welcomed the biggest names in show business each week as Orlando's guests, including his boyhood idols, Jackie Gleason and Jerry Lewis.

At the 1976 Republican National Convention in Kansas City, Missouri, Orlando danced to the tune of "Tie a Yellow Ribbon" with then First Lady Betty Ford. The media stated that it was to divert attention as Nancy Reagan entered the Kemper Arena convention hall. However, in Orlando's book Halfway to Paradise, he states that Mrs. Reagan was asked what her favorite song was, which happened to be "Tie a Yellow Ribbon", so it was chosen as her entrance song. Ronald Reagan unsuccessfully challenged Gerald Ford, for the presidential nomination that year but came back in 1980 to claim the presidency itself. Ray Barnhart, a Reagan co-manager from Texas, criticized Mrs. Ford for having "danced a jig" with Orlando. Barbara Staff, another Texas co-chairman, called Betty Ford's behavior "a low, cheap shot".

On October 12, 2015, with Telma Hopkins and Joyce Vincent Wilson present, Pacific Pioneer Broadcasters honored Orlando with their Art Gilmore Career Achievement Award at a celebrity luncheon.

Late 1970s struggles and solo work Along with the fame, Orlando had personal battles in the 1970s. He was briefly addicted to cocaine, and battled both obesity and depression. In 1977, due to the death of his sister, and the suicide of Orlando's close friend, comedian Freddie Prinze, Orlando had a breakdown, and retired from singing. He was briefly institutionalized, but returned to television with an NBC comeback special. From then, he continued as a solo artist, charting with two singles – the dance hit "Don't Let Go" in 1978 and "Sweets For My Sweet" in 1979. In the 1980s, he was a dominant force in Las Vegas, headlining various hotels with sold-out audiences.

Orlando continued primarily as a solo singer, performing on tour and regularly in Las Vegas and Branson, Missouri. He hosted the New York City portions of the MDA Labor Day Telethon on WWOR-TV since the 1980s but quit in 2011 in response to Jerry Lewis' firing from the Muscular Dystrophy Association. He has won the Casino Entertainer of the Year Award, the Best All Around Entertainer – Las Vegas four times, and, prior to that, three times in Atlantic City, the Jukebox Artist of the Year Award from the Amusement and Music Owners Association of New York, The Ellis Island Medal of Honor, and has also been bestowed with The Bob Hope Award for excellence in entertainment from the Congressional Medal of Honor Society in honor of his efforts on behalf of United States veterans. His work on behalf of American veterans led to his being named Honorary Chairman at the 40th Anniversary at the NAM-POW's Homecoming Celebration at the Richard M. Nixon Presidential Library in 2014.

In 2020, Orlando began hosting a Saturday night oldies program for WABC Radio as the New York City station partially restored its music format.

Orlando starred in the 1981 TV movie 300 Miles For Stephanie, playing a police officer who promises to walk over 300 miles to a sanctuary in order to obtain God's help to cure Stephanie, his gravely ill daughter. Others in the cast included Edward James Olmos, Pepe Serna and Julie Carmen.

In May 1981, Orlando appeared on Broadway in the title role of Barnum, replacing Jim Dale, who was on a three-week vacation.

During the 1984–85 season of The Cosby Show (its first season), Orlando played Tony Castillo, who runs a community center. He had a cameo appearance as himself in the 2002 film Waking Up In Reno, in which he sang a version of "Knock Three Times".

In 2003, Orlando had a recurring role in the children's animated series Oswald, in which he did the voice of "Sammy Starfish".

Orlando appeared in an episode of MADtv doing a sketch involving a court case, where the defense sings to persuade the jury about their side. He sang for the prosecution, thereby persuading the judge to give the defense jail for life. In another television program, Orlando was featured in "Larry the Cable Guy's Star Studded Christmas Extravaganza". He appeared in That's My Boy as Steve Spirou, a Happy Madison production starring Adam Sandler in 2012.

Support for veterans

Orlando is a longtime advocate for U.S. military veterans and "Tie a Yellow Ribbon Round the Ole Oak Tree" has become an anthem for service members.

Orlando serves on the Board of Directors for the Eisenhower Foundation, as well as Honorary Chairman of Snowball Express, an organization that serves the children of fallen military heroes.

He hosts the annual Congressional Medal of Honor dinner in Dallas, Texas. He has served as the Master of Ceremonies at the Secretary of Defense Freedom Awards

Personal life

Orlando was introduced by Jerry Lee Lewis to his future wife, Elaine, who had previously dated Buddy Holly. Tony and Elaine married in 1965, and had one child, Jon; they divorced in 1984. Five years later, Orlando was engaged to Francine Amormino, whom he married on April 29, 1990. The couple remained married as of 2021; they have one child.

On February 27, 2013, his mother, Ruth Schroeder of Hollister, Missouri, died in Branson, Missouri of a diabetic stroke.

In 2002, he wrote a memoir, Halfway to Paradise. Tony and Francine Orlando live in Branson, Missouri, with their daughter, Jenny Rose. Orlando's son Jon Orlando, from his first marriage, was a comedian from 1993 to 2002. Jon lives in Las Vegas and is currently the host of The Action

Junkeez Podcast as well as Wise Kracks Podcast with the legendary sports better Bill Krackenberger. It was announced on September 7, 2021, that Jon was hired as the CEO of MaximNFT.

Orlando was interviewed on The 700 Club explaining that he was raised Catholic and was "brought up with the Lord as my Savior"; but after a self-destructive period following his professional success with Dawn, he became a born-again Christian in 1978.

In 1990, Orlando received a star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame at 6385 Hollywood Blvd..

WHAT'S COOKIN?

EASY APPLE DUMP CAKE

This quick and easy apple dessert calls for just 4 ingredients – canned apple pie filling, yellow cake mix, butter and chopped pecans (optional). Top this awesome cake with vanilla ice cream and caramel sauce for a delicious treat. Bonus...your home will smell amazing!

2 cans of apple pie filling,
1 box of yellow cake mix,
3/4 cups of butter
1/2 cup of chopped pecans. Pecans are optional, but a great addition.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees F. Spray a 9x13 baking pan with non-stick cooking spray. Spoon apple pie filling evenly in bottom of baking pan then pour dry cake mix on top, spreading evenly (do not mix). Pour melted butter evenly over top, coating as much of the dry cake mix as possible by tilting the pan. Last, sprinkle chopped pecans evenly over cake.

Bake on middle rack of oven uncovered for 45-50 minutes, Cake is ready when it turns a light golden brown and bubbles on the side of the pan. Remove and allow to cool for 15 minutes before serving.

- 3 cups whole milk
- 1/2 teaspoon Kosher salt or to taste
- 1/2 teaspoon ground black pepper or to taste
- 1 can refrigerated jumbo biscuits halved lengthwise using a serrated knife to create 16 pieces
- 3/4 cup green onion rough chopped, white and green parts
- 3/4 cup sharp Cheddar cheese shredded

Instructions

Preheat oven to 350°F. Liberally spray an 11 x 7-inch baking dish with cooking spray. Line a large baking sheet with heavy gauge aluminum foil and place the prepared baking dish atop.

Warm the canola oil in a medium skillet over medium heat. Add the sausage and brown, breaking up large pieces into smaller pieces as you go. Cook the sausage until no pink remains. Drain the sausage onto paper toweling and wipe the skillet clean.

Place the skillet back over heat and add the unsalted butter to melt. Turn the heat to medium-high and add the flour and whisk constantly for a full minute. Whisk in the milk, salt, and black pepper and bring to a boil whisking constantly for 2 minutes. Remove the skillet from the heat. Add the well-drained sausage back into the pan and stir to combine.

Cut the biscuits in half lengthwise to create 16 pieces (most refrigerated canned biscuits come 8 to a can). Lay 8 halves in the bottom of the prepared baking dish. Spoon half the sausage gravy over the layer of biscuits followed by 1/4-cup of the chopped green onions. Repeat the layers beginning with the remaining biscuit halves, the sausage gravy, remaining chopped green onions, and

AZGFD asks hunters to report any harvest anomalies

When in doubt, let AZGFD check it out

Nature isn't perfect. If a hunter spends enough time in the field, there's a chance he or she, at some point, might harvest an animal that appears to be sick or deformed, or looks suspect during the field-dressing process.

While oddities are few and far between, and rarely present any cause for concern — especially when it comes to turning that harvest into delicious table fare — hunters are being encouraged to let a wildlife health specialist at the Arizona Game and Fish Department (AZGFD) take a look.

That would require hunters to save the internal organs (and keep them cold in a sealable plastic bag), then call any of the department's regional offices to schedule an analysis. Another option? Take several photos of the anomaly and email them to AZGFD veterinarian Anne Justice-Allen at ajusticeallen@azgfd.gov.

"Harvested wildlife can be the most 'organic' food out there, but occasionally they get sick and this sometimes results in a food safety issue," Justice-Allen said. "The department has the resources to test animals with signs of disease for our customers."

YOU JUST FOUND OUT YOU HAVE HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE.
NOW WHAT?

You've probably had your blood pressure checked countless times. It's a routine part of health care. Even your dentist might check your blood pressure. Maybe you've had normal blood pressure readings all along. Until one day, you don't.

A single high blood pressure reading could be an isolated event. But you should have it rechecked. If it's high more than three times in a week, you should talk to your doctor about ways to manage it.

While you might not expect to have high blood pressure (hypertension), it's a common condition. According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), it affects almost half of all adults in the U.S. Here's what you should know about high blood pressure.

What is high blood pressure?

"Your blood pressure is the force your blood exerts against the walls of your blood vessels," said Philip Gideon, MD, a cardiologist at Banner – University Medical Center Phoenix. It's measured with two numbers, the systolic number first and the diastolic number second. The systolic blood pressure number measures the pressure when the heart pumps. The diastolic blood pressure number measures the pressure when the heart rests between beats.

Here's how the American Heart Association defines high blood pressure or hypertension:

below 120 (systolic) and below 80 (diastolic) mmHg: normal
120 to 129 and below 80: elevated blood

You might think that you would notice something or feel differently if you had high blood pressure. But people with high blood pressure generally don't notice any symptoms—that's why screening is so important.

What are the health risks of high blood pressure?

According to Dr. Gideon, high blood pressure puts you at risk for a range of dangerous long-term health conditions. They include:

- Stroke
- Heart attack
- Heart failure
- Kidney failure
- Visual loss
- Memory loss or dementia
- Metabolic syndrome

How do I lower my blood pressure?
If you have high blood pressure, you'll want to get it back into the normal range. Depending on how high your blood pressure is, lifestyle changes, medication or both can help move your numbers in the right direction.

To start, you'll want to measure your blood pressure regularly, so you know what your average reading is. "Taking your blood pressure at home can confirm your diagnosis and help guide your lifestyle changes," Dr. Gideon said. If your doctor prescribes medication to help manage your high blood pressure, monitoring regularly can also help gauge how well your medications are working.

Lifestyle changes can help lower blood pressure

What helps high blood pressure? Here are some lifestyle changes you can try:

Modify your diet with a focus on nutrition and a healthy body weight. Try to lose weight if you need to since weight loss can help improve your blood pressure.

Consider following the Dietary Approaches to Stop Hypertension (DASH) eating plan to help control your blood pressure. It emphasizes vegetables, fruits and whole grains. It also includes fat-free or low-fat dairy, fish, poultry, beans, nuts and vegetable oil and other foods in limited amounts.

Avoid processed foods and fast foods, which are typically high in sodium. Too much sodium intake can raise blood pressure.

Reduce your caffeine intake.

Try to get at least 2.5 hours of physical activity per week. (Talk to your doctor first about your exercise plans.)

Steer clear of tobacco, alcohol and illicit drugs.

Manage your stress.

Make sure you get enough sleep.
"The most important factor in making lifestyle changes is consistency," Dr. Gideon said.

Medication can help lower blood pressure
Your doctor may recommend medication in addition to lifestyle changes to help treat high blood pressure. There are different types of medications for high blood pressure. You may need to try different ones or use two or more in combination, especially if you experience side effects. And the age to start blood pressure medication varies. Your doctor may suggest medication even for elevated blood pressure if you're 60 or older.

According to the American Heart Association (AHA), these common classes of blood pressure medications can help lower your blood pressure:

- Diuretics: help rid the body of excess sodium and water.
- Beta-blockers: help reduce your heart rate, its workload and its output of blood.
- ACE (Angiotensin Converting Enzyme) inhibitors: help your blood vessels relax and open.
- Angiotensin II receptor blockers: help keep your blood vessels open.
- Calcium channel blockers: block calcium from entering the smooth muscle cells of the heart and arteries, so your heart doesn't contract too forcefully.
- Alpha-blockers: reduce resistance in your arteries and relax the muscle tone of the vascular walls.
- Alpha-2 receptor agonists: decrease the sympathetic nervous system activity and present fewer risk factors for pregnant women.
- Combined alpha and beta-blockers: delivered via IV drip for people in hypertensive crisis or at risk of heart failure.
- Central agonists: help prevent blood vessels from tensing up or contracting.
- Peripheral adrenergic inhibitors: help block the neurotransmitters to the brain that tell the smooth muscles to constrict. They are typically only used if other medications are not helping.
- Blood vessel dilators: help blood flow better by causing the walls of blood vessels to relax and allowing the vessels to widen.

The bottom line

Seeing a high blood pressure reading for the first time can be scary but talking to your doctor can help you prevent serious health complications. To connect with a health care professional, reach out to Banner Health.

TRIVIA ANSWERS

- 1. Answer: In everyday conversation, an eon is frequently used as a term to exaggerate how long something took, much the same way the words "forever" and "ages" are used. However, when used in the context of science, particularly astronomy, an eon can be defined a precise unit of time. While a century is 100 years, and a millennium is 1,000 years, neither is even remotely as close to the length of an eon. For an eon to pass, you will need to wait a billion years. The word eon dates back to the greek word aion, which means "age."

3. Answer: The visual identity of one of the world's largest oil and gas companies has always been based on the graphical representation of its name, Shell. Shell's logo depicts a scallop shell for a specific reason. The fact is that Marcus Samuel, who founded the oil and gas company, originally sold antiques and boxes that were decorated with seashells. Later, his sons expanded the business and began exporting oil, which gradually grew into extracting fossil fuels. The business evolved, but the old logo concept remained. The logo is now so well-known that it frequently appears without the brand name.

4. Answer: When Sony's personal cassette player went on sale in 1979, it was sold under the names "Soundabout" in the United States, "Stowaway" in the United Kingdom, and "Freestyle" in Australia. The name Walkman, however, became so popular in Japan, it quickly spread overseas by word of mouth, to the extent that customers in other countries started asking for it by name. In 1980, Sony decided to change the name to "Walkman" worldwide. Sony stopped manufacturing Walkman cassette players in 2010, having sold more than 200 million units worldwide.
5. Answer: The Traveling Wilburys were a supergroup consisting of Bob Dylan, George Harrison, Jeff Lynne, Roy Orbison, and Tom Petty. The band recorded two albums, the first in 1988 and the second in 1990, though Orbison died before the second was recorded. The band members adopted pseudonyms as half-brothers from a fictional Wilbury family of travelling musicians. The term "Wilbury" was the nickname that Harrison created to refer to recording errors caused by faulty equipment. Harrison suggested "The Trembling Wilburys" as the group's name, but it was soon amended to "The Traveling Wilburys."

6. Answer: In English, we answer the telephone by saying the word "hello." In Italy, however, when you answer the telephone, you use a word that lets the person on the other end know that you are ready to speak. That word is "pronto," which literally translates to "ready." It dates back to when phone calls had to be connected manually by an operator, so the recipient had to signal in some way that he or she was ready and on the line. The conversation can be ended by saying "ciao" (an informal "bye-bye") or "arrivederci," which is a more formal "goodbye."

- 8. Answer: Ever wondered where Listerine got its name? British surgeon and medical scientist Joseph Lister was the founder of antiseptic medicine and a pioneer in preventive medicine. While his method, based on the use of antiseptics, is no longer employed, his principle that bacteria must never gain entry to an operation wound remains the foundation of modern surgery. Inspired by Lister, Dr. Joseph Lawrence created LISTERINE mouthwash, which in 1914 became the first over-the-counter mouthwash sold in the United States.

Yet she managed to enter the pop culture lexicon with just a handful of films, becoming Hollywood's most iconic sex symbol. Some of her most famous films included "The Misfits," "Some Like It Hot," "The Seven Year Itch," and "How to Marry a Millionaire." Monroe's bubbly onscreen persona masked a troubled offscreen life marked by depression, drug addiction, and rocky marriages. Monroe died in 1962 from a drug overdose that was ruled a probable suicide.

Celebrate Self-Improvement Month by Volunteering

(Gila County, AZ –) With September designated as "National Self-Improvement Month" CASA of Gila County is asking you to look into volunteering as a child advocate as part of your self-improvement goals!

"With over 100 children in the child welfare system from Gila County communities, we encourage every community member to look at all the ways they can help. We aim to get our community involved in helping our youth who all deserve safe, permanent, loving homes," says Emily Nader, CASA of Gila County Coordinator.

When considering the best volunteer role for you, she urges volunteers to think about the youth living in Arizona's foster care system.

"While we are in dire need of additional adults to volunteer as Court Appointed Special Advocates, we know that the role is unique and not the best fit for every adult looking to make a difference," said Nader, citing the multiple opportunities that are available in Gila County such as volunteering as a CASA, a Foster Parent, or serving on a Foster Care Review Board. There are multiple options for donating your time to helping our youth in foster care. Here are a few of these options.

Become a CASA Volunteer: A CASA Volunteer in Gila County donate approximately 10 hours a month to the child they are appointed to. Their time is used through various tasks such as visiting the child, joining virtual or telephonic meetings with the team, and documenting their volunteer activities. No special background or education is required to become a CASA volunteer, a caring and generous group that represents a wide range of cultures and professions, educational and ethnic backgrounds.

Once accepted into the program, CASA volunteers receive all necessary training. CASA volunteers must be at least 21 years old and willing to complete necessary background checks, provide references and participate in an interview. While serving as a child's CASA volunteer, you will receive ongoing support and assistance from a local CASA Coordinator. Learn more at www.CASAofGilaCounty.org

Open your home and serve as a Foster Parent: Foster parents serve the essential role of providing a temporary home for a child or sibling group. While a child's parent or parents work to remedy the circumstances that brought the child into care, the child needs a safe and consistent place to live. Learn more here: <https://dcs.az.gov/foster>

Volunteer as a member of the Foster Care Review Board. The primary role of FCRB is to advise the juvenile court on progress toward achieving a permanent home for a child involved in a dependency action and in out-of-home placement. Volunteers are assigned to one review board which meets for approximately eight hours one weekday a month, some rural boards meet less. Additionally, volunteers must be able to commit approximately six to eight hours at home reviewing case information in preparation for the case review. Learn more about this volunteer opportunity here <https://www.azcourts.gov/fcrb> To learn more about how you can become a part of the CASA team and make a difference in the life of an abused or neglected child from your community, contact the CASA of Gila County Program staff by calling 928-402-4427 or visiting the website: www.casaofgilacounty.org
