

HEY RADIO

Hey Radio, there's more than meets the eye we didn't know
We thought it funny with a smile like that but now we know better
Hey Radio, they still remember your name don't you know
A smile with your middle finger staring right back
Something now I miss and thanks for that

Did you know, I mean it, really know
Did you ever think to say hello
The world can be so cold and heartless without a soul
Special for a simple man
Rick he was a simple man
He would lead the strangest of lives' than anyone I ever known
Standing in the middle of the road with his radio
Everyday there he was, invisible to everyone
Even so we were too naïve to understand
Everyday there he was but something sick inside our minds
Laughing and pointing we should've know how scars would be left behind
Radio playing people rush by pay no mind

Hey Radio, there's more than meets the eye we didn't know
We thought it funny with a smile like that but now we know better
Hey Radio, they still remember your name don't you know
Something now I miss and thanks for that, oh thanks for that

What cha doin what cha doin with your hat pulled down
Standing in the road with your radio turned down down down way down down
Radio
