He slept in an abandoned train station, now he's a licensed forester inspiring millions

ETHAN HERNANDEZ Jollibee Olivarez—and by what he calls divine timing, the branch happened to be hiring.

“Oh diba, you see kung paano gumagalaw si Lord?” he said.

Ethan passed the UPLB exam and interview and was offered a slot in the BS Forestry program. Although it wasn't his dream course, he took it.

“This is UP already. Aarte pa ba?”

To support his family back in Bicol, he juggled multiple jobs: working at a computer shop during Jollibee rest days and serving as a student assistant on campus. He also sent money home whenever he could.

Despite his early reluctance toward Forestry, Ethan thrived. He eventually graduated cum laude—a milestone that unlocked new doors.

He became an instructor at UPLB, pursued a master's degree in Korea, and achieved financial stability.

“Napaayos na rin ang bahay namin sa Bicol. I fully paid off my own house in Los Baños, bought a car, and made other investments. Even better, my hours in Naga City.”

Clinging to hope and ambition, he wrote letters to some of the country's top universities: the University of the Philippines, University of Santo Tomas, De La Salle University, and Ateneo de Manila University.

“Yes, I was aiming high that time. Libre naman mangarap, eh,” he said. “I even told myself, ‘I don't mind being a servant as long as it's in a prestigious school.’”

With barely enough money for fare, Ethan hitched a free ride from a kind-hearted bus driver. He didn't go straight to Manila but got off at Turbina, Calamba, one of the few places he knew. From there, he made his way to Los Baños, Laguna, where some relatives lived—though he chose not to stay with them to avoid being a burden.

Instead, Ethan slept for two weeks in an abandoned train station near the Los Baños market.

“Napakabaho at napakaraming lamok. May mga aso pa na galisin,” he wrote. “I bathed from a public tap at night kapag wala nang tao.”

Despite these conditions, he wasted no time. The very next day, he began distributing printed copies of his letter to any school he could find—big or small.

Gagawin kung may lagnat

1. Kung walang thermometer, gamitin ang likod ng kamay at ipatong sa noo o leeg ng pasyente para malaman kung may lagnat.

2. Uminom ng 8-12 basong tubig sa isang araw. Ang pag-inom ng tubig ay nakapagpapababa ng lagnat dahil inilalabas nito ang init ng katawan sa pamamagitan ng pag-ihing.

3. Punasan ng basang tuwalya ang katawan. Ang pagpupunasan sa maiinit na parte ng katawan tulad ng singit, kilikili at leeg ay nakapagpapaghawa sa maysakit. Kapag napunasan na ang katawan huwag itong tuyuin. Hayaang mag-evaporate ang tubig para sumingaw ang init sa katawan.

4. Huwag magbalot ng kumot dahil lalo lang tataas ang lagnat.

5. Dapat hindi mainit ang kuwarte. Kung may aircon o electric fan, buksan ito. Ang preskong hangin ay makatutulong sa pagdaloy ng oxygen.

6. Kumain ng masustansiyang pagkain. Kailangan ng katawan ang lakas para labanan ang sakit. Ang lugaw, prutas at gulay ay mabuti sa katawan.

7. Matulog at magpahinga para lumakas ang katawan.

8. Puwedeng uminom ng Paracetamol tablet o syrup tuwing ikaapat na oras kapag mataas ang lagnat sa 38.5 degrees Centigrade.

In September 2016, Ethan passed the Forestry board exam.

Today, he's not only a licensed forester but also a digital content creator with nearly one million followers—something he never imagined during those days of sleeping in an abandoned station.

Through it all, Ethan has become an inspiration to many—a certified raketero who never gave up, no matter how hard the journey got.
