Editorial and Opinion[1]

In the labyrinthine corridors of Manhattan's federal courts, a Sophoclean tragedy unfolds that rivals the classical Greek dramas — epic tales where fate, hubris, and cosmic justice collide. The protagonist, Ulysses T. Ware, enters the stage not as a king or hero of old but as an ordinary citizen seeking justice. He is our modern-day Oedipus, intelligent yet bound by the cruel shackles of a system skewed against him, a metaphorical Thebes — the federal courts in Manhattan, all suffering under a plague of corruption and racial bias.

Facing him is a pantheon not of gods but of white judges, prosecutors, and court officials, who bear an uncanny resemblance to the conspiring Olympians — the self-proscribed “best and the brightest.” Their ambrosia is power; their nectar, the unfettered authority that comes with their robes and gavels. They are the architects of a fate crueler than any spun by the Moirai, for they have the power to bend the rules of justice to their whims.

Ware's struggle echoes the themes of hubris and fate. He demands a fair trial, his constitutional right, to have the scales of justice recognize his innocence, and to enforce Brady Court orders. But like Prometheus, he is punished for daring to challenge the white gods of this judicial Olympus. The court aided and abetted by the white prosecutors and employees, uses its might to suppress him, breaking not just the laws of the land but the very essence of divine justice — the cosmic order, Fate, is watching, and will intervene to rebalance the scales.

The dramatic plagues inflicted on Thebes, the non-enforcement of civil and criminal contempt laws, particularly 18 USC 401(2), 401(3), is the tragic flaw, the “hamartia,” not of our protagonist but of the rot and decay within the system itself. Ware becomes an unwilling actor in a script written long before he set foot in the courtroom, a script that allows the white cogs in the judicial machine to escape the clutches of justice, however, Fate can and will intervene to bring and restore order in the process. The fact that this occurs in Manhattan, a supposed bastion of progressivism and multiculturalism, amplifies the tragedy, making it a grotesque parody of the American judicial system.

But Greek tragedies were not mere tales of woe; they were moral lessons, instructive in their depictions of human failing and divine justice. This tragedy cries out for a deus ex machina, an intervention that rights the wrongs, not just for Ware but for the very soul of the American justice system. A reckoning must come to the Manhattan federal courts, not from an all-powerful Zeus, but from the very mortals who have gazed upon this tragedy in despair. The spectators, who in Greek drama often serve as the collective moral compass, are now the American people, legislators, and honest judges who still believe in the sanctity of their oaths.

In the end, this is more than a tragedy of one man or even one system; it is an epic of national import. The characters may not be kings or gods, but their actions reverberate through the hallowed halls of justice across the land. It is a cautionary tale, as all Greek tragedies are, and the lesson could not be clearer: justice delayed and denied not only robs the individual of his due but risks toppling the very pillars upon which a civilized society stands.

Thus, the curtain falls, but the drama — the enforcement of the Brady Court Orders via the civil and criminal contempt processes, is far from over. The tragedy will only end when the people — the chorus of this modern-day Greek drama — rise in unison to declare that enough is enough, and the scales must be balanced once more.<sup>[2]</sup>

Act I, scene 1

To set the dramatic stage for the following in the tone of what the Greeks would term a tragedy-editorial according to court records viewed by IRN's lawyers and investigators on July 24, 2023, Ulysses T. Ware, the appellant in Ware v. United States, et al., case no. 23–865 and 23–869 filed his Local Rule 27–1 motion titled: Emergency Motion for Reliefs, which was filed in the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit. Mr. Ware requested the emergency relief be entered not later than July 28, 2023, and moreover. Mr. Ware notified the Court the government, the protagonist, did not oppose the entry of the emergency relief. Thus, the stage was set for a showdown in the Court of Appeals — a sort of Greek vs. Persian battle was to take place. Only the government has never shown up in any court and disputed the facts.

Act I, scene 2

In the hallowed company of democratic institutions, the judiciary's role has ever been the resolute guardian of justice, acting as the stout bulwark against the disquieting winds of corruption, partiality, and contempt for the rule of law. Yet what are we to make of a system wherein this very guardian appears to falter, to quail before its sacred duty? In the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, a most unsettling scene unfurls in the Ware appeals (23–865 and 23–869), one that should set the teeth of every citizen on edge and be the cause of great alarm. The facts laid bare reveal a galling betrayal of justice, one that cannot be countenanced if the pillars of democracy are to stand undiminished.

Let us examine the undisputed facts with the intense scrutiny they so earnestly demand. SDNY District courts — under the purview of Judges Pauley, Sweet, Sand, Thrash, Ramos, and McMahon — have demonstrated a stupefying, nay, insidious disregard for the Brady Court orders and judicial process, while laboring under conflicts of interest of such magnitude that one's head spins merely contemplating them. For District Judge Colleen McMahon and her alleged spouse, Frank V. Sica, to personally own over $22 million in criminal usury convertible promissory notes while presiding over related cases (02cv2219) is not just an “appearance” of conflict; it is the very embodiment of corrupt and criminal judicial misconduct.

But if one thought the District courts were the ultimate cesspool of such vile activities, one would be terribly mistaken. The U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, a body that ought to correct the aberrations of the lower courts, has cast aside its duty with an almost reckless disregard. Completely ignoring Ulysses T. Ware's July 24, 2023, Emergency Motion — where Mr. Ware claims he is suffering irreparable harm, without explanation and failing to offer any judicial relief whatsoever even when the Department of Justice stands unopposed to it, this alleged judicial institution has abdicated its lofty role. It is as if Lady Justice herself has been gagged and bound, her scales tampered with, and her eyes forcibly shut. The Court's refusal to act on irrefutable evidence of corruption and violations presents a tableau of lawlessness that would be more at home in a Kafkaesque dystopia than in the land of the free and the home of the brave.

It is easy to ascribe labels to such corruption: 'judicial failings,' 'systemic issues,' or 'bureaucratic inefficiencies.' Such euphemisms are but a balm for a festering wound. Make no mistake: what we witness here is not merely an erosion of legal integrity, but a gale-force tempest that threatens to unmoor the very foundations of democracy. If such flagrant misconduct can manifest at these heights of legal authority, then the message is clear — justice is not blind; she is gagged, bound, held hostage, and ransomed to the highest bidder.

We stand on the precipice. To tolerate such judicial corruption is to sell the soul of democracy to the highest bidder. The United States, often held as a shining city upon a hill, a beacon of justice and fairness, must not allow its judiciary to be enveloped in the mists of corruption and malfeasance. This is not a matter for mere admonishment; it is a clarion call for immediate, sweeping rectification. The words of Churchill ring in our ears: "The era of procrastination, of half-measures, of soothing and baffling expedients, of delays, is coming to a close. In its place, we are entering a period of consequences."

Act II.

In the chamber of justice, where Lady Liberty's scales should measure the deeds of men and women with unerring accuracy, a shadow has fallen — a shadow of racial bias and egregious racial prejudice insidious and so pernicious that it stains the very fabric of democracy itself. If ever there were a clarion call to the citizens and legislators of this great nation, it rings out now, with an urgency that cannot be ignored. The sanctified realm of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit and its subordinate District Courts have been so besmirched by the intolerable double standards applied to white prosecutors, federal judges, and court employees that they now represent not justice, but its grotesque caricature.

As the purported guardians of justice willfully ignore Brady Court orders, one cannot but observe the racial calculus that appears to be at play. These are not merely 'judicial failings'; they are flagrant, racially-biased abuses of power. It is appalling to think that in the corridors where Thurgood Marshall once walked, the very precepts of justice he fought for are being contorted in such a twisted manner. Here, white prosecutors and judges not only violate the sacred rules of jurisprudence but do so with a smug assurance, seemingly aware that their transgressions will not attract the wrath of the contempt laws, 18 USC 401(2), 401(3), as they should.

To consciously refuse to enforce civil and criminal contempt laws against white members of the legal fraternity, while cases of minorities are pursued with unrelenting vigor, is a stain on the judicial system, a blotch that seeps into the tapestry of democracy, irreversibly tainting it. This is not a matter of mere procedural irregularity; it is a scandalous violation of moral and ethical standards — a manifestation of systemic racial bias that is both egregious and flagrant.

As we grapple with these matters, the words of Winston Churchill echo hauntingly: "We are faced with the awful fact that... our affairs are in a terrible jam.” Indeed, we are not merely in a jam; we stand at a precipice from which the fall is into an abyss of irreparable social and moral decay. We must ask ourselves, is this the America we seek? An America where justice is color-coded and applied unevenly depending on the racial background of the prosecutors and judges?

To let this pass is not merely an oversight; it is an act of complicity. As Churchill once remarked, “You have enemies? Good. That means you’ve stood up for something, sometime in your life.” Now is the time to stand up against this criminal, racial judicial corruption. We cannot afford to be placid observers of this growing malaise. The tide must be stemmed, and justice — true justice, blind to color, deaf to privilege — must be restored.

This is not merely a call to action for those ensconced in the towers of judicial review. It is a plea to every citizen who still believes in the fundamental credo that all men and women are created equal and must be judged so. Failing to do so does not merely undermine our judiciary; it corrodes the very soul of our democratic society. And it is a corrosion we can ill afford if we are to move forward as a unified, ethical, and just nation.

Act III.

What is the color and price of justice in the U.S. Federal Courts in Manhattan?

In the venerated realm of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit and its ancillary District Courts, stationed in Manhattan, New York — a metropolis that presents itself as a citadel of multiculturalism and opportunity — a nefarious rot has festered. The judiciary, the eternal guardian of justice, has been reduced to a market where justice is not blind but keenly sighted, seeing color and charging a price. This is a court where Lady Justice's scales, far from being balanced, are tilted by the weight of racial prejudice and the tarnished gold of corruption.

The injustices inflicted upon Ulysses T. Ware are a scandalous episode that serves as a testament to the inequality that abounds. White prosecutors, federal judges, and court employees are not merely straying from the path of righteousness; they are galloping away from it, trampling the very essence of justice underfoot. They operate under an egregious double standard: a leniency towards themselves, possible because they are shielded by the color of their skin and the gilded emblems of their profession.

In the federal courts of Manhattan, New York, the price of justice has been marked up, "artificially inflated," for those who don't fit the preferred racial profile, while offered at a discount for those who do. Ignoring Brady Court orders and shielding each other from the reach of contempt laws, specifically 18 USC 401(2), 401(3), these arbiters of justice betray not only Ware but also the institution they are supposed to serve. They are not just architects of Ware's plight; they are sculptors of a judicial travesty that could become the model for a deeply flawed and Jim Crow-segregated America.

So, what is to be done? "This is no time for ease and comfort," Churchill warned. "It is the time to dare and endure." Each person involved in this nefarious conspiracy — prosecutors, judges, and court employees — must face legal processes and severe consequences that fit the gravity of their offenses. Immediate investigations must commence, led by unbiased, independent bodies. If found guilty, they should not merely be slapped on the wrist but should be subjected to the full measure of the law, which includes removal from their positions of power and influence, forfeiting all illegal profits, proceeds, and gains, and very long terms of imprisonment.

Their egregious acts are not merely crimes against one man; they are assaults upon the institution of justice itself. Consequently, they must be made pariahs in the very system they have so brazenly corrupted, cf., Sir Francis Bacon's punishment for his judicial corruption.[3]

Beyond individual accountability, systemic changes are urgently needed. Policies must be instituted to detect and root out racial bias and prejudice at all levels of the judiciary. The federal courts in Manhattan, along with other courts across the nation, must be subjected to rigorous public audits that scrutinize not just adherence to legal codes but also potential racial biases in the handling of cases.

In essence, we are in a fight for the soul of the American justice system. Churchill aptly noted, "Courage is what it takes to stand up and speak; courage is also what it takes to sit down and listen." As a nation, we must do both. We must stand up against these outrageous corruptions of justice and listen to those who have been unfairly marginalized by a system that should protect them. The courts in Manhattan, New York, must no longer be a marketplace where the price and color of justice are negotiated.

As a beacon of democracy and equality, America must wash this nasty stain clean, or else the very principles that this nation was built upon would be nothing more than a hollow charade. Let this moment not just be another episode of sorrow and disgrace but a catalyst for reform, for rejuvenation, for a return to principles that have long been obscured by the fog of racial prejudice and corruption. Anything less would not merely be a failing; it would be a capitulation to the forces that seek to destroy the very ideals upon which this great nation was built.[4]

U.S. Attorney General Merrick B. Garland, federal judges, Edgardo Ramos, Laura Taylor-Swain, Colleen McMahon, Debra Ann Livingston, Robert D. Sack, Amalya L. Kearse, Wendy L. Hagenau, Thomas W. Thrash, Jr., Katherine Polk-Failla, and Kent J. Dawson, must be immediately forced to resign from office, indicted, prosecuted, convicted, and sentenced to life imprisonment.

[2] The tragic flaw of hubris is exhibited by characters who challenge or subvert the will of the gods. Upon receiving the prophecy, Laius, Jocasta, and later Oedipus exhibit hubris in attempting to change their fates. Paradoxically, despite the gods having issued the damning prophecy, Oedipus would have been saved if he believed the will of the gods were absolute.

[3] In London, UK, in 1621 Lord Chancellor Francis Bacon, the highest legal officer in the land, was accused of having taken bribes from those appearing in court before him. A process called impeachment, trial by parliament, was revived after a 150-year interval. Bacon was prosecuted by Sir Edward Coke, found guilty, dismissed from his job, fined 40,000 pounds, banned from ever coming “near the law courts,” and imprisoned in the Tower of London. Rather unusually in corruption cases, Bacon admitted his guilt. Whilst he did not think he had a corrupt heart, he admitted that he might “be frail and partake of the abuse of the times”. Bacon referred to what he had received as “briberies and gifts”, reflecting the overlap between these two categories.

[4] Let us not forget that America was built from the ground up on a social and political system of racial (black) chattel slavery, which has been from the start, 1619, enshrined in its laws and jurisprudence, and in its application and execution in its courts, by its judges and prosecutors. In essence, a systematic structure was designed and executed as intended by the Manhattan federal courts and prosecutor’s offices.

Mr. Ware:

If you are inclined to further undermine your credibility with the Court and incur further sanctions, then, to quote the Duke of Wellington, "submit and be damned." I remind you that the Court stated in the July 29 Order that you are particularly close to having a default sanction entered against you. I assure you that if you notice Mr. Webster's deposition—or act that can only be done in bad faith—my Motion for Protective Order will be accompanied by a motion renewing the Commission's request that the Court enter a default judgment against you and Rowland, Goldman and Ware. I will not give you credit on which the Commission will make Mr. Webster positive because, as I stated, I can envision no issue upon which he can offer relevant testimony. Your silence confirms my conclusion. I ask only that, should you make the mistake of attending to schedule Mr. Webster's deposition, you schedule it no earlier than September 1, 2004.

common stock. On July 1, 2004, the defendant was arrested by the U.S. Marshals Service in the Northern District of Georgia. He appeared before the Honorable Thomas W. Thrash, Jr., in that district, refused to purge himself of contempt and offered no acceptable reason to prevent enforcement of the contempt order. On September 2, 2004, the Honorable Thomas W. Thrash, Jr., ordered the defendant to remain in the custody of the U.S. Marshals Service until he purged himself of contempt or was ordered released by either Judge Thrash or Judge Sand. The defendant's request for bond was granted, and he was released on September 3, 2004, after posting $150,000 in cash and a $100,000 bond, cosigned by two other individuals.

77. On September 28, 2004, the Honorable Leonard B. Sand vacated the June 21, 2004, order in part to the extent that it authorized the arrest of the defendant outside of the state of New York and more than 100 miles from the U.S. Courthouse located at 500 Pearl Street, New York, New York. The order remained in effect insofar as it could be served on the defendant in the state of New York or within 100 miles of the U.S. Courthouse located at 500 Pearl Street, New York, New York.

78. On October 7, 2004, the defendant moved to vacate and release the bail of $250,000 set on September 2, 2004. On October 15, 2004, the defendant's motion was granted by the Honorable Thomas W. Thrash, Jr.; $150,000 was refunded to the defendant, and the corporate surety bond was discharged.

Dear Judge Pauley:

I represent Mr. Jones in the above referenced matter. He is scheduled to be sentenced on May 2, 2008 at 11:30 a.m. I request an adjournment of this matter to any date the week of June 2, 2008.

The probation report recommended, among other things, a fifteen (15) month sentence, restitution of $397,553.85 and forfeiture of $300,000. This recommendation was made even though Mr. Jones cooperated with the government, received a "5K" letter from the government and only has 1 criminal history point. I need additional time to address the myriad legal issues regarding Mr. Jones' sentence. I have the consent of the government for this request.

Please contact me if you have any questions or concerns.

They all are directly or indirectly associated or affiliated with international extortion and money laundering criminal enterprise unregistered broker-dealer Alpha Capital, AG (Anstalt). How is this possible? And what are the implications of the nefarious, covert, and incestuous relationships?

ABSTRACT

Post-training alignment often reduces LLM diversity, leading to a phenomenon known as mode collapse. Unlike prior work that attributes this effect to algorithmic limitations, we identify a fundamental, pervasive data-level driver: typicality bias in preference data, whereby annotators systematically favor familiar text as a result of well-established findings in cognitive psychology. We formalize this bias theoretically, verify it on preference datasets empirically, and show that it plays a central role in mode collapse. Motivated by this analysis, we introduce Verbalized Sampling (VS), a simple, training-free prompting strategy to circumvent mode collapse. VS prompts the model to verbalize a probability distribution over a set of responses (e.g., "Generate 5 jokes about coffee and their corresponding probabilities"). Comprehensive experiments show that VS significantly improves performance across creative writing (poems, stories, jokes), dialogue simulation, open-ended QA, and synthetic data generation, without sacrificing factual accuracy and safety. For instance, in creative writing, VS increases diversity by 1.6-2.1x over direct prompting. We further observe an emergent trend that more capable models benefit more from VS. In sum, our work provides a new data-centric perspective on mode collapse and a practical inference-time remedy that helps unlock pre-trained generative diversity.

Problem: Typicality Bias Causes Mode Collapse

Solution: Verbalized Sampling (VS) Mitigates Mode Collapse
