Our rankings are built specifically for PPR (Point Per Reception) leagues and are designed to help you identify value throughout your draft—not just follow the consensus. We encourage you to use this guide as a tool while also trusting your instincts and adjusting to how your draft unfolds.

This draft kit includes rankings for Quarterbacks (QB), Running Backs (RB), Wide Receivers (WR), Tight Ends (TE), and Defenses/Special Teams (D/ST). While D/ST rankings are included, we generally recommend waiting until the later rounds to draft a defense, as weekly matchups often have a greater impact than preseason rankings. We do not include kicker rankings, as the position is highly matchup-dependent and should typically be selected with one of your final picks.

Thank you for supporting Encinas Unfiltered. We hope this guide helps you draft with confidence, find hidden value, and build a championship-caliber roster. Informed. Unfiltered. Unmatched.

 Rookie/Dynasty Watchlist (QB, RB, WR, and TE)

Name	Team	Position	Fantasy Outlook
Fernando Mendoza #1 Overall Pick Player comparison: Joe Burrow	LV	QB	Mendoza is 1 of only 4 QB's to go undefeated, win a Heisman, win a National Championship, and be the #1 overall pick. Kirk Cousins expected to start the year as QB1. Draft priority in Dynasty Leagues, but hold off in Redraft Leagues or as a stash. Expect him to play the second half of the season.
Jeremiyah Love #3 Overall Pick Player comparison: Reggie Bush	AZ	RB	Love has all the skills to be elite in the NFL, but will be in a 3RB committee, so proceed cautiously and do not draft early unless the coach says he's a starter. Draft priority in Dynasty Leagues, but risky in Redraft Leagues.
Carnall Tate #4 Overall Pick Player comparison: Cooper Kupp	TEN	WR	Third best WR in the draft and 2nd best WR on his team in college. TEN has made a lot of changes to help Cam Ward succeed, but be cautious. This is Tennessee's first year with a new Head Coach and OC. Great Player for Dynasty Leagues and draft as a third WR or backup for Redraft Leagues.
Jordyn Tyson #8 Overall Pick Player comparison: George Pickens	NO	WR	#8 overall pick by NO. Was the second best WR in the draft. He does have some injury concerns (torn ACL) as he is currently not participating in training camp. He should be WR2 on his team and with Tyler Shough as his QB he could have some potential as a depth WR for your fantasy team with some upside.
Ty Simpson #13 Overall Pick Player comparison: Mac Jones	LAR	QB	Expected to be a backup and learn behind Matthew Stafford. He should only see the field if Stafford gets injured. Great addition for Dynasty Leagues, but a do not draft for Redraft Leagues.
Kenyon Sadiq #16 Overall Pick Player comparison: Vernon Davis	NYJ	TE	He ran a 4.40 40 yard dash and has elite pass catching and aggressive run blocking. A great player to draft for Dynasty Leagues and a TE2 for Redraft Leagues.
Makai Lemon #20 Overall Pick Player Comparison: Amon-Ra St. Brown	PHI	WR	#1 WR in the draft. Primarily a slot WR. He only dropped three balls in three seasons in college. He is a polished route runner and can create separation in man and zone coverage. He was drafted to replace AJ Brown. Great pick up in Dynasty Leagues and as a WR3 in Redraft Leagues.
KC Concepcion #24 Overall Pick Player Comparison: Brandon Aiyuk	CLE	WR	He averaged 15.1 yards per scrimmage and led his team in receptions and receiving TD's in college. Hands have been questionable and a sticking point during the NFL draft causing him to slip. Quarterback play for the browns will determine his overall performance, but dynasty value is there
Omar Cooper Jr. #30 Overall Pick Player comparison: Rashee Rice	NYJ	WR	The 5th best WR in the draft. Cooper lines up in both the slot and out wide. He threatens with his vertical presence, but has had separation issues in man coverage. A good candidate for Dynasty leagues, but a bench WR in Redraft Leagues.
Jadarian Price #32 Overall Pick Player comparison: Rico Dowdle	SEA	RB	With the departure of Kenneth Walker and with Zach Charbonnet still recovering, Price should see immediate starting RB value. Draft priority in Dynasty Leagues and RB2 sleeper value in Redraft Leagues.

Target and Fade Candidates

Winning your draft isn't just about drafting great players—it's about drafting them at the right value. Our Targets are players we believe are being undervalued and have the potential to outperform their current draft cost. Our Fades aren't players we're avoiding entirely; they're players we believe are being drafted too early relative to their expected production. By identifying both, you can maximize value throughout your draft and build a roster with league-winning upside.

Targets

- Jaxson Dart
- AJ Brown
- Nico Collins
- Devonta Smith
- Sam Laporta
- Cam Skattebo
- Jaylen Waddle
- Brian Thomas Jr.
- Jadarian Price
- Juwan Johnson
- Cam Ward
- Wan'dale Robinson

Fades

- Ashton Jeanty
- Patrick Mahomes
- Rashee Rice
- De'von Achane
- Breece Hall
- Malik Nabers
- Garrett Wilson
- Marvin Harrison Jr.
- Travis Kelce
- DK Metcalf
- Bhayshul Tuten
- Mark Andrews

Encinas Unfiltered's Pro Tips

1. Draft for value, not name recognition.
2. Target dual-threat QBs.
3. Don't be afraid to reach for upside late in the draft.
4. Monitor training camp buzz and preseason usage
5. Draft evenly. Collect as many "superstars" in every position as possible. Having security in your #1 spot is a nice thing throughout the season.
6. Don't hoard a position you will lose.
7. Take chances on rookies. Don't be afraid to take a rookie in ANY round once again within reason. They are scary but trust your judgment.
8. Draft for bye weeks as well. It's a simple tip to draft a player that doesn't have the same bye week but a simple tip that is overlooked every season
9. Draft the player at the value you see him at. Obviously you aren't drafting Blake corum in the 2nd round but if you are high on a player don't wait too long to try and get him in a later round. Someone else might take him right before you. Value your players appropriately and to YOUR liking!
10. Draft to block. If someone in the league takes a player that is injury prone then don't be afraid to take the handcuff in a reasonable round. If you're happy with your WR's but you know someone else needs one and you're unsure of who to take then make the pool smaller for your opponents to pick from!
11. Have fun! This is very important! It's a game!!! Remember to not take things personal or let ego take over. We respect the commissioner's rules and players in the league. If you can't because you are not happy with the league then bite your tongue and finish out the year if you can by winning it all with middle fingers out boys!
12. Have draft parties. Obviously doesn't always work but if you haven't been to a draft party where everyone can attend and you all eat and drink and draft together it is amazing! Like attending a professional sporting event. You don't get it till you're there and then you know why it's an experience.

HERO RB STRATEGY

What is it?

The Hero RB strategy focuses on securing one elite, workhorse running back early in the draft before prioritizing wide receivers and other premium positions. You'll return to running back later in the draft to build depth.

Example Start

Round 1: RB

Rounds 2-5: WR, WR, TE/QB, WR

Rounds 6+: RB depth

Pros

- Secure an elite RB with a high weekly floor
- Build elite WR depth
- Flexible throughout the draft

Cons

- Requires later-round RBs to produce
- An injury to your Hero RB can hurt your roster

Best For

- PPR Leagues
- Half-PPR Leagues

Difficulty

★★☆☆☆ (2/5)

Encinas Unfiltered's Tip

Don't force a second running back early. Trust the strategy and continue taking the best value available.

ROBUST RB STRATEGY

What is it?

The Robust RB strategy prioritizes running backs early by selecting two or even three within the first four rounds. This gives your roster a significant advantage at fantasy football's thinnest position.

Example Start

Round 1: RB

Round 2: RB

Round 3: WR

Round 4: RB

Pros

- Elite RB depth
- Great injury protection
- Strong trade value throughout the season

Cons

- WR depth may suffer
- More dependent on RB health

Best For

- Standard Scoring
- Half-PPR

Difficulty

★★★★☆☆ (3/5)

Encinas Unfiltered's Tip

Don't continue drafting running backs after your core is established. Balance your roster before it's too late.

ZERO RB STRATEGY

What is it?

Zero RB ignores running back early in favor of elite wide receivers, quarterbacks, and tight ends. Running backs are drafted later, relying on breakouts, committees, and waiver wire additions.

Example Start

Round 1: WR

Round 2: WR

Round 3: WR

Round 4: TE/QB

Round 5+: RB

Pros

- Elite receiving corps
- High weekly ceiling
- Excellent depth at WR

Cons

- Weak RB room early
- Requires active waiver wire management
- Riskier than traditional builds

Best For

- Full PPR

Difficulty

★★★★☆ (4/5)

Encinas Unfiltered's Tip

This strategy only works if you're aggressive on the waiver wire throughout the season.

HERO WR STRATEGY

What is it?

Hero WR is the opposite of Hero RB. Draft one elite wide receiver early, then build a balanced roster around them with running backs and other positions.

Example Start

Round 1: WR

Round 2: RB

Round 3: RB

Round 4: WR

Pros

- Elite weekly consistency
- Easier to build roster balance
- Strong in PPR formats

Cons

- RB depth can become thin
- Requires finding value later

Best For

- PPR
- Half-PPR

Difficulty

★★☆☆☆ (2/5)

Encinas Unfiltered's Tip

Don't panic if running backs start flying off the board. Stick to your plan and trust the value.

ZERO WR STRATEGY

What is it?

Zero WR delays selecting wide receivers in favor of running backs, quarterbacks, and tight ends. While uncommon, it can work in certain league settings.

Example Start

Round 1: RB

Round 2: RB

Round 3: QB

Round 4: TE

Round 5: RB

Pros

- Dominant RB room
- Positional advantage at QB and TE

Cons

- Thin receiver group
- Much harder in PPR leagues

Best For

- Standard Scoring
- Experienced Managers

Difficulty

★★★★☆ (4/5)

Encinas Unfiltered's Tip

You'll need to identify breakout receivers later in the draft for this strategy to succeed.

BALANCED STRATEGY

What is it?

The Balanced Strategy focuses on taking the best player available while maintaining positional balance. Instead of forcing a specific build, you adapt to how the draft unfolds.

Example Start

Round 1: RB

Round 2: WR

Round 3: WR

Round 4: RB

Pros

- Flexible
- Works from any draft position
- Limits roster weaknesses

Cons

- Doesn't dominate any one position
- Requires discipline and preparation

Best For

- All League Formats

Difficulty

★☆☆☆☆ (1/5)

Encinas Unfiltered's Tip

Let the draft come to you. Reaching for positions usually creates more problems than it solves.

ELITE TE STRATEGY

What is it?

Draft one of the elite tight ends early to gain a weekly positional advantage over your opponents.

Example Start

Round 1: WR

Round 2: TE

Round 3: RB

Round 4: WR

Pros

- Weekly positional edge
- Reliable production
- Eliminates streaming headaches

Cons

- Costs an early-round pick
- Less depth at RB or WR

Best For

- Managers who believe in the elite TE tier

Difficulty

★★☆☆☆ (2/5)

Encinas Unfiltered's Tip

Only draft an elite tight end if they truly separate themselves from the rest of the position.

ZERO TE STRATEGY Rod's Pick

What is it?

Instead of investing early at tight end, Zero TE waits until the middle or late rounds to target value and breakout candidates.

Example Start

Round 1: WR

Round 2: RB

Round 3: WR

Round 4: RB

Round 5: WR

Round 8+: TE

Pros

- More depth at premium positions
- Better overall roster value
- Easy to pivot if value falls

Cons

- May require streaming
- Less weekly consistency

Best For

- Most Redraft Leagues

Difficulty

★★☆☆☆ (2/5)

Encinas Unfiltered's Tip

Don't draft a mediocre tight end early just because everyone else is taking one.

ELITE QB STRATEGY

What is it?

Draft one of the elite fantasy quarterbacks early to lock in high weekly production and rushing upside.

Example Start

Round 1: WR

Round 2: RB

Round 3: QB

Pros

- Weekly consistency
- High scoring ceiling
- Set-and-forget starter

Cons

- Opportunity cost
- Less depth elsewhere

Best For

- Leagues with 6-point passing TDs or elite dual-threat QBs

Difficulty

★★☆☆☆ (2/5)

Encinas Unfiltered's Tip

Only invest early if you're getting a quarterback capable of finishing as the overall QB1.

LATE-ROUND QB STRATEGY

What is it?

Wait until the middle or late rounds before drafting your quarterback while loading up on running backs and wide receivers early.

Example Start

Rounds 1-7: RB/WR/TE

Rounds 9-12: QB

Pros

- Maximum roster depth
- Excellent draft value
- Easy to stream if necessary

Cons

- Less weekly upside
- Must identify breakout quarterbacks

Best For

- Traditional 1-QB Leagues

Difficulty

★☆☆☆☆ (1/5)

Encinas Unfiltered's Tip

Quarterback is one of the deepest positions every year. Take advantage by building strength elsewhere first.

BONUS STRATEGIES

Double RB Start

Open your draft with two elite running backs before addressing other positions.

Double WR Start

Build around two elite receivers and dominate weekly target volume.

Best Player Available (BPA)

Ignore positional runs and draft the highest-ranked player on your board every round.

Stacking Strategy

Pair your quarterback with one (or more) of his pass catchers to maximize weekly upside.

Handcuff Strategy

Draft the backup to your elite running back to protect against injury and secure the team's backfield.

Upside Bench Strategy

Fill your bench with high-upside players instead of low-ceiling veterans who are unlikely to become weekly starters.

Final Draft Tip

No strategy is foolproof. The best fantasy managers understand multiple draft strategies and know when to pivot based on how the draft unfolds. Stay flexible, trust your rankings, and always prioritize value over forcing a predetermined roster construction.

Informed. Unfiltered. Unmatched.

Running Back Handcuff Guide

This guide is not all-inclusive. It highlights the backup running backs I believe have the best combination of upside, opportunity, and fantasy value if the starter ahead of them misses time. Not every backup running back is worth rostering. Some backups would likely be replaced by a committee, while others may not receive enough volume to become reliable fantasy starters even if the lead back is injured. Use this guide as a resource to identify the handcuffs with the highest potential to make an impact—not as a complete list of every backup running back in the NFL.

Starting Running Back	Backup Running Back(s) (Handcuff)
Jahmyr Gibbs	Isiah Pacheco
Bijan Robinson	Brian Robinson
Christian McCaffrey	Jordan James / Kaelon Black
Saquon Barkley	Tank Bigsby
Kyren Williams	Blake Corum
Jadarian Price	Zach Charbonnet (injured)
Jeremiah Love	Tyler Allgeier / James Connor
D'andre Swift	Kyle Monangai
Aaron Jones Sr.	Jordan Mason
Chuba Hubbard	Jonathan Brooks
Travis Etienne	Alvin Kamara
Bucky Irving	Kenneth Gainwell
J.K. Dobbins	RJ Harvey
David Montgomery	Woody Marks
Rico Dowdle	Jaylen Warren / Kaleb Johnson
Quishon Judkins	Dylan Sampson
TreVeyon Henderson	Rhamondre Stevenson
De'von Achane	Ollie Gordon II
Breece Hall	Braelon Allen

Player Stack Guide

This guide focuses on the player stacks I believe offer the best combination of upside, consistency, and league-winning potential. Player stacking—drafting teammates who benefit from each other's success, such as a quarterback and one of their pass catchers—can increase your weekly ceiling and help maximize explosive scoring opportunities. Use this guide to identify some of the most valuable stacks to target throughout your draft, while remembering that strong fantasy rosters can still be built without stacking players.
