

ASTORIA ODD FELLOWS BUILDING

a journey in preservation

“There may have been a time when preservation was about saving an old building here and there, but those days are gone. Preservation is in the business of saving communities and the values they embody.”

You guys, I am so excited I can barely type this!! The AAMC, in partnership with the Astoria Downtown Historic District Association (ADHDA), was chosen as one of 20 finalists (the only one in Oregon!) vying for a 150k Partners in Preservation Main Street Grant!! The grant recipients are determined by votes and we are up against some huuuge cities (you know the ones- Seattle, LA, Austin, Denver). We are by far the smallest town in the running so we need your support!

Where Women Made History

Every place has a woman's story to tell.

Odd Fellows Building

Astoria, OR

Located in the port city of Astoria, the oldest American settlement west of the Rockies, the Odd Fellows Building was the first structure rebuilt after a devastating fire in 1923.

Today, three women own the Odd Fellows Building, which has served the local community for over 90 years. Astoria Arts and Movement, the heart of the building, is a flourishing center for local dance, performing arts, and physical education classes that enhance, inspire, and engage the community.

Tenants in the building are all women-owned businesses, including an art studio, apothecary, gallery, and a coffee shop.

Benjamin Moore supported this incredible transformation through color consultations, renderings, and the donation of product.

WEST.

On one red morn in December, 1922, Astoria burned. The story of that disaster is old. The story of the New Astoria is new. Where 11 hours of hellfire served to sink the entire business section of the city into a 40-acre desert with even the streets destroyed, it has taken months to create the new city—but the new city is very fair to look upon. Not only is it good to see, but there is a stirring tingle in one's blood when he reads in stone walls which have risen from stark cinders the tale of a people's indomitable will, deathless faith and unflinching courage.
