The next meeting will be Monday, January 19, at 7:00 p.m. at the First Presbyterian Church, 302 N. Dunton Ave., in Arlington Heights. As always, bring your show and tell.

Frozen Finger Fun Fly - 2026

"Insanity in individuals is something rare - but in groups, parties, nations, and epochs, it is the rule." - Friedrich Nietzsche the German philosopher. Welcome to the insanity of Blue Max R/C 2026.

New Year's Day temperatures at 9 a.m. Thursday hovered near 11 degrees Fahrenheit. The real feel dropped to 6 degrees Fahrenheit with winds blowing 3 mph out of the NW and gusting to 7 mph. A layer of snow and ice covered the field. Weekend temps were forecasted to be a bit warmer, but still brutally cold.

Driving to the flying field New Year's Day morning I asked myself this question: "Who else would be insane enough to fly in weather like this just to ring in the New Year"? When I pulled into the Forrest preserve entrance there were two deer casually gnawing on some of the foliage along the tree line. Ironically, at the very moment I drove past them they turned to look at me, then at one other. With their mouths still moving, I swear, it appeared to me as if they were asking each other that very same question.

Animals survive the cold through the use of various strategies. Strategies, like migration, hibernation, and physical adaptations such as thicker fur, blubber, and specialized heat exchange systems to stay warm, conserve energy, and find food, while using shelters like dens or tunnels for extra protection from the cold.

In spite of my best efforts to protect myself from the cold I still walk away with frozen fingers. I don't have the physical adaptations the animals have, but I should look into those hand warmers I see mentioned in the Blue Max chat as being the next best thing. In the meantime, for me, there's nothing like a couple cups of hot coffee to warm my hands around to get the blood flowing again.

It's a curse - a sickness I tell ya - to have the need to fly regardless of how cold the weather is! But it's nice to know there are a few more of us insane enough to do just that. Check out the pictures below and the list of members who joined in on this 2026 New Year's Frozen Finger Fun Fly insanity.

Happy Landings and Happy New Year.
