BUDGET CUTS SERIOUSLY AFFECT STATE ARCHAEOLOGICAL STAFFS

There has been a serious loss of archaeological staff in state agencies recently due to budget cuts and reorganization. Just recently, the DEC (Department of Environmental Conservation) has lost two archaeologists and there is the possibility that another senior person will be moved shortly, leaving no none to do the crucial work of reviewing permits for local community projects; the Water Resources Program is closing and will no longer work with local communities, interface with the EPA (Environmental Protection Agency) or review permits; the Department of Parks & Recreation has lost staff from its Historic Sites Office and the National Registry no longer has an archaeologist on staff.

Nan A. Rothschild, President of PANYC (Professional Archaeologists of New York City) wrote a series of letters to government officials addressing this problem, including Governor Cuomo and the heads of the DEC and OPRHP, and urges other concerned groups and individuals to do the same. As she states,

While we understand that these are difficult times economically within the state, we urge you to reconsider these changes and find some way to restore some of the personnel (which had already been cut to a bare minimum) working on archaeological problems. There is so little remaining of our historic and archaeological past. We must all make the strongest commitment to preserve it.
